ROOSEVELT TALK OPENS NEW PARK ON SHENANDOAH

Praised as Work of CCC Boys.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Picture on Back Page.)

Shenandoah National Park, Big Meadows, Va., July 3.—[Special.]—Here in the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, standing in the center of a shallow grassy bowl, President Roosevelt today dedicated the new Shenandoah National park as a symbol of "the joint husbandry" of human and natural resources.

The President took the occasion to praise the Civilian Conservation corps for work on the trails and roads of the newest national park as well as other projects undertaken by the corps. Many CCC boys in trim brown uniforms stood in the crowd during the christening ceremony. Six sat on the speakers' platform as guests of honor.

Heavy rains in the forenoon cut the crowd to little more than 5,000, but the sun flashed out in midafternoon as the Roosevelt car climbed upward through the passes and the rolling mountains came into full view out of the lifting mist. The roadside was dotted with trilliums, larkspur and mountain laurel. More than 176,000 acres of this beauty was presented to the federal government by the state of Virginia.

Praises CCC Objectives.

The scenes were awe inspiring and when President Roosevelt had reached the natural amphitheater he was moved to the assertion that conservation work by the CCC was as significant as the fruits of private industry. He said:

"In every part of the country local and state and federal authorities are engaged in preserving and developing our heritage of natural resources; and in this work they are equally conserving our priceless heritage of human values by giving to hundreds of thousands of men the opportunity for making an honest living.

"The product of the labor of the men of the Civilian Conservation corps, who have opened the Shenandoah National park to the use and enjoyment of our citizens, is as significant as though instead of working for the government they had worked in a mill or a factory. They have a right to be as proud of their labor here as if they had been engaged in private employment.

Cites Tragedy of Waste.

"In bygone years we have seen the terrible tragedy of our ages—the tragedy of waste—waste of our people, waste of our land. It was neither the will nor the destiny of our nation that this waste of human and material resources should continue. That was the compelling reason that led us to put our idle people to the task of ending the waste of our land.

"The involuntary idleness of thousands of young men ended three years ago when they came here to the camps on the Blue Ridge. Since then they have not been idle; and today they have ended the idleness of the Shenandoah National park. It will be a busy and useful place in the years to come, just as the work of these young men will, I am confident, lead them to busy and useful lives in the years to come.

"Our country will need many other young men as they come to manhood for work like this—for other Shenandoahs.

Similar Needs Elsewhere.

"In almost every other part of the country there is a similar need for recreational areas for parkways which will give to men and women of moderate means the opportunity, the invigoration and the luxury of touring and camping amid scenes of great natural beauty.

"There is merit for all of us in the ancient tale of the giant Antaeus, who every time he touched his mother earth arose with strength renewed a hundredfold.

"This park, therefore, together with its many sisters which are coming to completion in every part of our land, is in the largest sense a work of conservation. Through all of them we are preserving the beauty and the wealth of the hills and the mountains and the plains and the streams. Through all of them we are maintaining useful work for our young men. Through all of them we are enriching the character and the happiness of our people."

ONE FIREWORKS DEATH, 2 HURT ON EVE OF 4TH

Marie Dunn, 6 years old, daughter of Policeman James Dunn of the New City station, died last evening in St. Bernard's hospital of burns caused by a firecracker. She was the first victim this year of heedlessness with Fourth of July fireworks in Chicago. The firecracker was tossed in her lap Wednesday afternoon as she sat in an areaway near her home at 7915 Aberdeen street. The explosion set her clothing afire.

The police reported that it still had not been determined who threw the firecracker. The child cried out in all her moments of consciousness, however, that "a little boy did it," her father said.

A Sane Fourth Planned.

Dunn and his wife, Margaret, have four other children.

"We had already made reservations for a cottage at a lake and I was going to take the family away from dangers like this over July 4," Policeman Dunn said. "Firecrackers have been sold right in the neighborhood and I am anxious for the responsibility of this crime to be fixed."

"The guilt is with parents and storekeepers more than with the children," said Mrs. Dunn.

Mrs. Dunn was the first to see Marie in flames. She attempted to smother the fire with a rug and called to her husband, who was asleep. He was burned on the arms as he extinguished the child's blazing clothing with a blanket.

Two Others Injured.

A boy and a man were injured by fireworks they were using last night. Frank Janca, 15 years old, 3737 South Albany avenue, suffered an injury of the right eye when a firecracker exploded in his hand at 63d street and Cicero avenue. Louis Kolb Jr., 36 years old, 6633 Milwaukee avenue, Niles, suffered burns on the hand that were treated at St. Francis hospital, Evanston, when a firecracker exploded as he was lighting it.

In most parts of the city reports indicated that the ordinance forbidding the sale of fireworks was being enforced. Roadside stands in some of the suburbs, however, were selling fireworks under village permits, and these explosives in many instances were being brought into the city.

Parents Urged to Help.

Numerous appeals have been issued to parents, urging that children be kept away from fireworks. On the Fourth of July last year three persons in the Chicago area lost their lives by handling the dangerous playthings and many others were injured.

The number of fireworks injuries in recent years is in sharp contrast, however, with conditions that existed before THE TRIBUNE, thirty years ago, inaugurated a campaign to stop the slaughter of children on the Fourth. In 1900 lockjaw developing from fireworks burns caused 406 deaths in the United States.

GUARD HIGHWAY SAFETY

Numerous entertainments will be held today for the hundreds of thousands of Chicagoans who will remain in the city to celebrate the holiday. For the other thousands who plan motor trips during the week-end elaborate precautions have been taken to promote highway safety.

The drive for increased safety had the participation of police forces engaged in the direction and control of motor trafic. Sixty-five state highway policemen will be constantly on duty along the county roads and forty deputy sheriffs have been assigned to guard busy intersections. Within the city Capt. David Flynn of the trafic division will have 500 men on duty.

Heavy Outflow of Motorists.

Trafic experts said that indications were for a tremendous outflow of motorists early today for the resort sections in Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan. Peak of the outbound movement is expected this morning. Returning trafic will be heaviest tomorrow night.

A sobering forecast was issued by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club. He said that if the normal ratios for the holiday prevail there will be eight deaths and 185 injuries in auto accidents in Cook county over the week-end.

TWO HURT WHEN MIDGET RACING AUTO RUNS WILD

Mrs. George F. Bensley, 46 years old, 504 Austin avenue, and her granddaughter, Bernice Jenkins, 6 years old, 216 Church street, both in Libertyville, yesterday were injured in an unusual accident while attending the Libertyville centennial celebration. They are in the Condell Memorial hospital in the suburb with broken ankles.

They were standing in a crowd at Cooke and Brainard avenues, watching a race between midget automobiles, several of them hand made affairs. One car, driven by Kenneth Walker Jr., 12 years old, 1517 Ridgeland avenue, Waukegan, went out of control, plunged into the crowd and struck Mrs. Bensley and her granddaughter.

Relief at New Crisis; No Pay for Employes

The prospect of payless relief administration employés and a refusal to work without pay by an organized group of the employés threw a new and serious complication into the Chicago relief situation last night.

Attorney General Otto Kerner of Illinois has ruled that state relief funds raised by the sales tax may not be used for the payment of clerks and case workers who oversee distribution of the funds to the needy. Last night City Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes declared that such expenses probably cannot be paid out of funds to be raised by the projected special tax of 30 cents on each $100 of property valuation.

Must Wait for New Deal.

Since there are no other sources of revenue for relief purposes the case workers and office employés who direct distribution of the dole now face the prospect of working without pay until new legislation can bring a remedy.

Several hundred relief administration employés met yesterday in a hall at 159 North State street and refused to comply with the city's suggestion they work temporarily without guarantee of pay. They were called together by the Association of Workers in Public Agencies, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Lyons to Meet Group.

Leo M. Lyons, commissioner of relief in Chicago and executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, said he would meet this morning with a delegation representing the association. Under the ruling by the corporation counsel, he said, he is prevented from guaranteeing even future salaries to employés engaged in writing emergency food orders.

Orders have been written in the last three days for about 10,000 of the 87,000 relief families in Chicago. Even these were not mailed yesterday because a $600,000 check for the state's allocation to the city, mailed to the county treasurer Thursday night, had not been received by the city treasurer.

Appeal to Horner Fails.

Mr. Lyons conferred for two hours yesterday with Gov. Horner at Springfield, and reported that he had failed to get permission to use state funds for administration purposes. After Lyons had received the opinion from the corporation counsel he declared "there seems to be no alternative, but that proper action be taken by the general assembly."

ZEP HINDENBERG OVER SEA; ASKS REPORT ON FOG

New York, July 4 [Saturday].—(AP)—The zeppelin Hindenburg, somewhere over the Atlantic in the vicinity of Cape Cod, appealed early today for radio reports on flying conditions thereabouts.

The radiomarine station at Chatham, Mass., reported the zeppelin, starting its fourth eastward crossing of the North Atlantic, flew low over that station at 1 a. m., eastern standard time, poking its way through a foggy area of low visibility. Chatham is at the tip of Cape Cod.

The naval communications office at the Lakehurst, N. J., terminus of the Hindenberg closed at midnight, eastern standard time, and up to that time had received no reports the airship was encountering weather difficulty.

SLEUTH BEATEN TO DEATH; TAXI DRIVER IS HELD

Nathan Rogin, 26 years old, of the Olympic hotel, 1015 North Clark street, a taxicab driver, was arrested early today at Division street and Western avenue, charged with the fatal beating of John Pipski, 45 years old, 3036 Lyndale street, an investigator for an attorney.

Police learned the beating followed a quarrel at Oakley avenue and Division street. Pipski died shortly after being taken to St. Mary's hospital, where physicians said his skull had been fractured. His wife, Nellie, said her husband was employed by Attorney Thaddeus C. Toudor, who has offices at 160 North La Salle street.

Swallows Radium; Fear Serious Internal Burns

Los Angeles, Cal., July 3.—[Special.]—Charles L. Jones, 57, occasioned more excitement at County hospital where he is a patient than any other two persons the hospital ever treated. Jones was being treated for an ailment in his mouth, with a tiny platinum capsule containing 30 milligrams of radium, valued at $2,000. The capsule was held in place with a string. But Jones got so nervous he chewed the string, gulped, and the capsule was gone. Now the doctors and nurses are trying to keep the capsule moving through his body so he won't be burned from the inside out.

Bee Attacks Driver and Truck Hits Auto

Kewanee, Ill., July 3.—(AP)—Distracted by a bee which he tried to brush off, the driver of a bread truck let his vehicle swerve into an automobile driven by Nick Ahr of Galesburg today. Ahr was brought to a hospital here. He has a broken arm, severe cuts on his legs, and possible internal injuries.

Suit Against Helen Hayes Is Dismissed

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A nonsuit was entered in the $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Carol Frink, Chicago newspaper woman and dramatic critic, against the noted actress, Helen Hayes, yesterday afternoon.

Judge Walter La Buy of the Circuit court, after hearing statements of opposing counsel, said dryly: "By agreement of the parties, a nonsuit may be entered."

Thus ended the suit in which Miss Frink accused Miss Hayes of stealing the love of her husband, Charles G. MacArthur, successful playwright and former Chicago newspaper man. MacArthur married Miss Hayes in 1928, after Miss Frink, whom he had married in 1920, had been given a divorce in 1926. The hearing drew throngs to the courtroom for three days.

Actress Is Vindicated.

The case was disposed of before Miss Hayes opened her defense and she was completely vindicated.

No money was asked for, no money was offered, and none was paid, it was pointed out by both Attorney Jay Frederick Reeve, who with Attorney Howard Ellis and John Martineau defended Miss Hayes, and Attorney Samuel Golan, who with Attorney Gerald Wiley represented Miss Frink.

Since the statute of limitations has run, Miss Frink is prevented from bringing another suit on the same charge. Under the law, in a nonsuit, the plaintif is liable for court costs, the nominal appearance fee required of the defendant, and the cost incurred in obtaining depositions. In this case it amounted to "some hundreds of dollars," counsel for Miss Hayes said, but they declared they would not move to recover the costs she is entitled to.

Attorney Explains Suit.

When the court convened at 2 p. m. Attorney Golan stepped before the bench and declared that the plaintif had taken a nonsuit. In a lengthy statement he declared that filing of the suit in 1932 was precipitated by Miss Frink's reading magazine interviews with Miss Hayes on her romance with MacArthur.

"After this suit was brought it was intimated to the press Miss Frink was an extortionist and gold digger," Attorney Golan said. "The only thing she wanted after the publicity attending this case was a chance to tell her story."

Theft of Love Claimed.

Miss Frink had claimed in her suit that Helen Hayes "maliciously and willfully" stole the love of MacArthur.

"The plaintif admitted to me last night, she in a sickbed," her attorney said, "that her testimony yesterday might have been unduly harsh on MacArthur. Her opinion is there was no malice whatever in Helen Hayes when she became engaged to and married MacArthur."

Under the new practice act the defendant's consent must be given before a dismissal can be entered in a case. Attorney Reeve addressed the court, revealing that Miss Frink had been ready to dismiss the suit in the morning. A long conference, held immediately after Attorney Reeve began cross-examination of Miss Frink, concerned this.

Miss Hayes Changes Mind.

"Mrs. MacArthur [Helen Hayes] preferred a judicial finding," Mr. Reeve told the court. "During the noon adjournment, however, she changed her mind. In accepting the nonsuit, we do so with the firm belief your honor would find for the defendant without our producing a single bit of evidence, and with the firm conviction that she is not guilty."

As soon as Judge La Buy entered

Husband Also Hides from Inquiry.

The search for Mrs. Carmelia Freed and her husband, Edward, who are wanted for questioning about the murder of Miss Audrye Vallette, the platinum blonde party girl, led investigators last night into a maze of connections between the gangster elements of prohibition days and the present night club world of Chicago.

The Freeds have been in hiding since early Thursday afternoon when Miss Vallette was shot to death in her apartment on the seventh floor of the La Salle Tower apartments at 1211 North La Salle street. Last night police were informed they may be sheltered in the underworld, although they are not believed to be together.

Admits Visit to Apartment.

A picture of Mrs. Freed has been identified as that of the woman who went to Miss Vallette's apartment and was seen leaving immediately after the shooting. From her hiding place yesterday Mrs. Freed was reported to have admitted she was the woman who went to the hotel and later drove away in an automobile.

She also said she knew her husband was friendly with the glamorous party girl, police were informed. After the shooting Mrs. Freed was seen in the Nut House, a tavern at 550 North Clark street, where she took pictures of herself from the wall and hurried away in an automobile. Mrs. Freed's husband is manager of the tavern and she was once employed there as a hostess.

Wife Refuses to Surrender.

The police were told that Mrs. Freed refuses to surrender until she has conferred with her husband. While following other clews to the murder, the police attitude in the search for the Freeds did not seem last night to be more than watchful waiting. Attorney Abe Marovitz, who said he represented the Freeds, told Capt. Andrew Barry of the Hudson avenue police that Freed is out of town, recovering from an illness.

The lawyer said he expected Freed to return by Monday, when the tavern manager will go to the police station. Meanwhile Mrs. Freed can reach her husband if she gets in touch with Marovitz, the lawyer said. Despite the fact that Mrs. Freed was found by interviewers yesterday, the police apparently were no nearer to finding her than they were immediately after the shooting. A detail of police has been stationed at the Freed home, 4901 Drexel boulevard.

Find Links with Underworld.

In the history of the Freeds and Miss Vallette police found evidence of their closeness to hoodlums and former gang leaders.

Miss Vallette, who was 31 years old, was a typical member of the night club demi-monde of the last few years. She had known many men; was always available for a party if the man had the price. The walls of her bedroom were adorned with photographs of celebrities of the theatrical and sporting world. In her diaries and the letters found among her effects were references to underworld characters. She corresponded with a convict in the Michigan state prison.

From her Gary home and an education in a convent school Miss Vallette came to Chicago 14 years ago. She had been married and divorced when she was 21 years old.

Wed After Drinking Bout.

In 1931—when she was 26 years old—she met Earl Schroeder, a traveling salesman. They were married—after a drinking bout, it was said—and a year later separated. Miss Vallette divorced Schroeder last March and took back her maiden name.

The night club world and its habitues, particularly on the near north side, was changing when Miss Vallette first came here in 1922, and it continued to change during her gay career. She became an integral part of it.

During most of the first two decades of the century "night life" was a tawdry appellation, applied mostly to the goings-on in the sequestered red light district around 22d street. With the end of the world war and the coming of prohibition night life centered in the cabaret district springing up in and around the loop. The higher strata of society stayed away from the cabarets.

With the repeal of the prohibition amendment, Miss Vallette found her metier. Society's attitude toward cabarets was changing. Hostesses were available at these night spots. Miss Vallette was one of the girls who would accept employment for the evening. She and these other girls were attractive companions, adept at small talk and drinking. They might pass for the wives of the men they accompanied, particularly if these wives were safe at home or out of town.

It was in this atmosphere that Miss Vallette met Edward Freed some six months ago. He was not the free spending type she preferred but witnesses said there appeared to be an infatuation between them from the beginning.

Freed's Checkered Career.

Freed has had a checkered career, police learned. His brother, Leo Freed, employé of a loop liquor company, is a brother-in-law of Jack Guzik, former Al Capone lieutenant, according to police. During prohibition days Edward Freed was said to have worked for Hymie Levin, one of Capone's collectors.

Mrs. Freed, who is 34 years old, was born in Italy and came to Pittsburgh with her family at an early age. She sometimes used the first name of Ruth. When she was 14 years old she married Vingenzino Biangino in Brownsville, Pa. She divorced him here in July, 1934, charging he deserted her in 1930. The court records show that a son, Jackie, who would now be 17 years old, was born of this marriage, but do not indicate his whereabouts.

On Aug. 1, 1934, she was married to Freed, who had won a divorce a few weeks earlier from Mrs. Anna Freed. The same attorney, Charles M. Hurwitz, represented Mr. and Mrs. Freed in their divorce actions.

Another Mrs. Freed Appears.

Last evening a woman who identified herself as Mrs. Anna Koletsky Freed, 38 years old, 933 Airdrie place, told the Hudson avenue police that she was married to Freed in 1917 and did not know he had divorced her.

Mrs. Anna Freed said she knew Freed's present wife, adding he had been friendly with Carmelia since 1926. At that time, Anna said, Freed encountered Carmelia on the south side. Carmelia frequented that district—around 43d street—Anna stated, and Freed met her in a drug store one evening. Anna said that Carmelia is a woman of fiery temper and was jealous of Freed's associations with other women.

Three diaries left by Miss Vallette were cross-sections of the life of a play girl. The entries told of her habits, an apparently continuous round of liquor and night life adventure.

Picture of Hostess' Life.

One name—"Eddie"—sometimes designated by the initial "E" appeared more frequently than others in the last diary, covering the first six months of this year. Details of it appeared in the paper yesterday morning. Excerpts from other diaries, made public last night, give a cross section of Miss Vallette's design for living and a vivid picture of a "hostess'" life:

"March 3, 1932—Started drinking again at noon. Don kept calling me so I finally went and had some drinks. Bill walked in when I was here and punched me in the ribs."

"Thursday (three years later). Beauty parlor today. Lashes, bleach, etc., for three hours. Called Eddie, so met him and drove over to P.'s for some drinks. Came home about 6 a. m."

"Monday (1935)—Paid some rent. Would have paid it all but Arthur's check came back. Damn him! Sent all my magazines to a hospital for children."

Letter Bares Sordid Life.

A letter written by a girl friend, Peggy, from Miami, Fla., was also found among Miss Vallette's effects. It was addressed to Ann—Miss Vallette was registered at the hotel as Annabelle Blake.

"Some old man is taking us with plenty of money," Peggy wrote. "He is very handsome, too. Know we will have a swell time as he's got the dough.

"We have been doing pretty good out here. I give some people here your phone numbers. Said they would call you, nothing less than $5 or $10."

And in another letter Peggy wrote: "I give your number to several men, not less than five or ten. Mr. Levy may call you soon. He is 5."

A diary found in Mrs. Freed's apartment covered a period in 1934 up to and including her marriage to Freed in August of that year. It disclosed a stormy courtship, during which she continually was jealous of the tavern manager's affairs with other women.

Jealousy After Marriage.

That this jealousy did not subside after the marriage was evident from stories told police by witnesses to quarrels between the Freeds. James McKinney, 36 years old, a carpet salesman employed at 188 West Wacker drive, told police last night that he saw a quarrel between the couple early Thursday morning, about seven hours before the murder. McKinney said he entered the Nut House a few moments after a woman he identified as Mrs. Freed.

"A few minutes later she ran out to her car," McKinney said. "A man I believe was Freed followed her. She scratched his face. As she drove away she called back: 'I'll be back and give it to both of you.' I saw her go to another tavern shortly after and some one in there called out: 'Take the gun away from her.'"

Relatives Appear at Inquest.

An inquest into Miss Vallette's death was opened yesterday in the chapel at 1158 North Clark street. The slain woman's sister, Mrs. Cecilia Surridge, and her mother, Mrs. Hilma Vallette, both of whom live at 8028 Phillips avenue, appeared.

They maintained a cold indifference as they gave the family history to Deputy Coroner Edward Edelstein. Audrye's grandfather was Col. Henry Vallette, who fought in the civil war and was one of the first settlers of Wheaton. Col. Vallette was an uncle of the late Elbert H. Gary, once head of the United States Steel corporation. Mrs. Vallette said she had seen her daughter only three times in the last year, the last time two weeks ago.

At that time Audrye was ill, Mrs. Vallette said. The mother said she never questioned her daughter about her friends, although the elder woman "wondered how Audrye got all those pictures in her room."

Mrs. Surridge, who is 33 years old, stonily disclaimed all knowledge of her sister.

"I don't know the girl," she exclaimed. "I saw her last week for the first time in a year."

In contrast to the attitude of the mother and sister, Audrye's father, E. Perry Vallette of Gary, manifested deep concern over her death. Vallette was divorced from Audrye's mother in 1920 and remarried in 1924. At his home in Gary he said he would pay for his daughter's funeral.

"She was once a lovely girl, quiet and well mannered," Vallette said. "She was a good daughter. I didn't bother her after she went away. I thought she could take care of herself all right."

The inquest was continued to July 16 to allow the police more time for investigation.

Wife's Diary of Stormy Wooing

A diary kept by Mrs. Carmelia Freed, the woman sought for questioning about the murder of Miss Audrye Vallette, was found yesterday in her apartment. It tells of her affair with her husband, Edward Freed, before their marriage on Aug. 1, 1934.

The whole exhibit is a picture of the sordid life of night club habitues and as such its exposure may have a value. Excerpts from the diary:

Jan. 4 [1934]—Found two girls' addresses in Eddie's pockets. Went to see them, but found only one and she was with some guy she said was her husband. Got all wet, for I fell in a puddle of water getting out of a cab.

Jan. 6—Have an awful headache.

Jan. 8—Called the Doc. He said I have the flu. I sure feel bad. A man called and said Eddie borrowed $170 on the car on Oct. 26. I asked Eddie about it and he denied it.

Jan. 9—Sick in bed all day. Ruth was here. Eddie won't tell me what he did with the $170. I think that's going to split us up. I think he spent it on some girl or he would have asked me for it.

New Battle with Eddie.

Jan. 12—Eddie came home at 6:30; left at 8:30; came back at 2 a. m. and never asked me how I felt.

Jan. 13—Got up today and feel good. Eddie came home, gave me $20, and started to fight with me because I looked in his pockets. He went out and wouldn't even take me to dinner.

Jan. 14—Looked in car and found address of a girl in Ohio. We had an awful fight. Eddie was going to shoot me. When I came back Eddie was all packed, but he won't take his things out of here.

Jan. 15—Dorothy and I were in bed when Eddie arrived. He slugged me and we had a big fight.

Not Speaking to Eddie.

Jan. 16—Sick in bed with nerves. Eddie and I aren't speaking. I can't sleep and sure feel bad. I am between water and fire.

Jan. 18—I guess I will go to a hospital soon. It doesn't make any difference if I live or not; better dead than living like this.

Jan. 20—Got up at 2 p. m. feeling o. k. Went down town shopping, then to mother's for dinner, and to hairdresser's at 8:30 p. m. Then I went to Fern's for a few drinks. I got home at 3:30. Eddie was home. Not talking to E. yet.

Jan. 21—Eddie went to cemetery with Harry. It's a nice day, but I can go to hell as far as he cares. He went to Ireland's with some girl and to a show by himself. He got home about 1:45. I was at my mother's and to Ginsburg's, then home at 2:30 a. m.

Jan. 22—Got $200 out of bank to send mother home.

Jan. 23—Eddie came home and we had an awful fight. I was going to tear up the furniture, but he stopped me. I took the car and we had another fight in a drug store. He took his clothes out of here. I called Ann and he had a fight with her on the phone. I called Hy and he called him and he left me alone.

Jan. 24—Hy called. Went to meet him at 12:30. Expect him to call me soon. He is the cause of all my trouble. E. was O. K. until he met him. I cried all day. I wish I could locate E. I called all over town.

Jan. 26—Met E. in the drug store and we came home. Had a big fuss. I don't think we will be the same again. He paid Norman for me.

Jan. 27—I don't feel good; fussing made me sick. If I was sure he liked some one else I would fade out of his life. E. gave me $20 and $10 for phone. Had another fuss.

Feb. 1—Coughed all night. Feeling punk. Had temperature 101. Tried to find Eddie, but he stayed out all night. Tommie stayed and took care of me.

Feb. 2—Feeling very bad. E. isn't home yet. He called about 10 a. m. and said he was drinking, but I know he isn't a drinking man. He came about 4 p. m. We had a big fight. He went out at 8:30, came back at 11, and we had another fight. I feel awful.

Feb. 10—E. got home at 5 and left at 7:30. We had a few words. I really think he has some one else. Time will tell. I am so lonesome.

Feb. 11—E. came back at 4 a. m.; said he had to work. He must think I am dumb. I guess I am, or I wouldn't be with him.

Peace—Then More War!

Feb. 19—Frank drove me out to 107th street, then I went to meet E. We had a big fight. He got home about 4 a. m. and we made up. Took $100 out of the bank [$25 left].

Feb. 26—Had a fuss. I called him at garage and they called me Bertha. I guess that's the girl E. is fooling with.

[Things ran along smoothly for several weeks, according to the daily notations, except for a "fuss" now and then.]

April 1—This is the first Easter I didn't get any flowers from E. I sure feel bad about it.

May 11—E. bought me a lot of clothes. He sure is sweet, and I love him so much it hurts.

Lipstick and a Phone Number.

June 2—We have been getting along so nice until today; had a fuss. He got home at 6. Had lipstick all over him and a girl's phone number.

June 3—Found two more numbers, and we had a big fight. Then we made up.

July 13—I got my divorce today.

Aug. 1—Eddie and I were married this noon. Frank was best man. I wore a yellow dress, white shoes and hat.

Aug. 2—Went to Pittsburgh tonight [to visit mother]. Eddie and Frank saw me off.

Party Girl's Diary of Night Life

Life as it was lived by a girl of the night clubs is exposed in the diaries of Audrye Vallette, 31 year old blonde who was slain Thursday in her room at the La Salle Tower apartments, 1211 North La Salle street. The diaries, which cover a period of five years, were discovered in a desk of Miss Vallette's apartment. They are a stark record of human frailty, of casual disregard of all the standard moralities, of a great pre-occupation with eating and drinking—and of the general unhappiness and dissatisfaction of a woman who made her living through her association with men in the more or less gilded resorts of Chicago. Excerpts of the diaries, beginning in October, 1935, follow:

Oct 6.—H. called me this a. m. and I was too tired to go down. Real sorry now, but I have to sleep some time. Bill called me to meet him in the Empire room. As we were leaving the hotel for the Chez Paree ran into S. M. Was I thrilled. Saw lots of my old friends. Had a real pleasant time with Bill, the first person I've clicked with for ages. Sam and Phil H. called me to come down. So I did with Peggy. Must have been 4 o'clock.

Oct. 7—We came home at 8:30 a. m. Breakfast and slept till 1. Had to dash downtown. Bought a white lace formal. Real sweet. Didn't have one minute today. Just made the beauty parlor. Soon as I got upstairs Mr. Jennings called, so dashed over. From there to Harry's New York bar. Then Max's. Finally got tight. Home at 6.

One Lonely Evening.

Oct 8—Stayed home all evening. Phone never even rang. Thought it must be out of order. Phil came by and was a little better natured, thank God.

Oct. 9—Am I tired today! Mamma came this noon. Home all day. Phil came and got me and we went over and had some beer. Mamma still up when I got home.

Oct. 10—Ironed a few slips, fried myself a steak. Margie called today. Al, a friend of Max from St. Louis, Irene and Jim. Also Phil at 8 p. m. Went to Irene's. Jim called. He asked for the Queen of Sheba. Went to Augustan's for some soup. I felt sick. Another drink and I would have been.

Oct. 11—Mailed the money to Maryanne. Also a letter to mamma and Mary. Ye gods. Nobody called and it's about 8. Stayed home. Couldn't sleep tonight.

Money Goes in a Hurry.

Oct. 12—Took Baby [her dog Duchess] out. Had a bleach, manicure, ordered groceries, so my ten didn't last long. Stayed home all evening.

Oct. 13—Went to the Seneca at 9:30 p. m. Peggy came over. Jan called. We drank over two pints of McBrayer, then to Chinatown for real Chinese food. Phil picked me up and we went to the Nut House for some beer. He was certainly a pain. I found the phone rang all day. Al called from the Chez, Haz from the Blackhawk. George called from Indiana. Will be here Fri.

Oct. 14—Went to the Palmer. Had three calls from there before I left. Friend of Harry's, Al, and John P. Did I laugh in the elevator when the fellow accidentally swung his arm and hit some dignified looking dame.

Oct. 15—Up about noon and, O, so tired. My sleep very broken last night. Made my own dinner, chicken, etc., plenty butter and cream. Will I be fat? Have to send my shoes to be stretched. My feet are driving me crazy. Stayed home all eve.

She Wearies of George.

Oct. 19—Dashed down to have my veil fixed. I could have killed that saleswoman. Went to see George for a short time. I can hardly bear him.

Oct. 20—Birthday and what a hell of a birthday. Cried all day, so nervous and upset. Went down to see George. Came right back home. Wish I'd never gone. Phil took me to see Greta Garbo. Came home. Jar. called. So my birthday was saved. We talked till 4:30. He's very sweet and interesting. Drank a little King's Ransom.

Oct. 22—Mr. War. had a luncheon app. with us. I was too ill to eat, but managed to drink a little beer. Fell asleep a few hours. Came home feeling very blue and depressed.

Oct. 23—Had my new cocktail suit sent out. Went to the Nut House for something to eat. I just had soup and a baked potato for dinner. Met an acquaintance there, so we didn't have to spend our money.

Oct. 24—Didn't sleep all morning; hard on my nerves. Had my hair done and a new set of lashes. George of Ind. called, that so and so. Took a cab to Ray's for one little drink, then home, but not to sleep.

Oct. 25—Ka and I went down to the Palace to see "Last Days of Pompeii." Had a few drinks and dinner at Anne's cocktail rail. Phil came by. We took Baby to the park and had a few beers.

Oct. 29.—Went to see Dale at St. C. Met Max and went back stage to see Benny D. at Palace. Had a couple of drinks at Celtic bar. Saw a friend of Ben's and he was very insulting. What else could I expect? Took Irene to the Drake bar with me. Breakfast at the drug store.

Oct. 30.—Am exhausted. So tired I can hardly walk. Mr. W. of Kansas City called. So tired I cut him off short. Tried to get him all aft. He finally got me and I went to the Congress. Had dinner and took him to the train. Grand man. Home and had a nap. Mr. Lou C. called from the Drake so I dashed over at 1 a. m. So tired I couldn't even drink.

DROP $100,000 SUIT AGAINST HELEN HAYES

Critic Breaks on Stand; Actress Cleared.

the formal finding, spectators rushed forward seeking autographs of Miss Hayes and her husband. Trembling, Miss Hayes walked to the jury box and seated herself, looking up at reporters with an uncertain smile and asking: "Are we permitted to smoke now? I'm nervous."

In their excitement over questioning her the reporters failed to offer her a cigaret, until she said again, in a childlike manner, "Please, may I have a cigaret?"

"Most Terrible Day."

Then she sank back and said in a shaken voice: "This has been the most terrible day I ever had. O, it was much worse than the other two days in court."

Pressed as to just why it was "terrible," she said impetuously:

Her eyes glistened with a suggestion of tears, although she did not cry, and she smiled a wavering smile.

Asked if she felt sorry for Miss Frink, she threw out both hands and said, "I'd be sorry for any one who was—O, it looked like torture to me. I couldn't stand any more of it."

Determined to Be Cleared.

Thus, in her own words, she explained why the nonsuit was agreed upon. She continued, when a larger gathering of reporters was before her:

"Our side forced the issue in this case. Her counsel wanted a continuance. At my special request the suit was forced to trial. I wanted it brought into the open, because it had caused publicity for three years. I wanted to be cleared before the public which supported me and trusted me.

"I wanted to be cleared, too, because I have a child growing up. I didn't want to feel that my husband would be considered culpable in any way.

"I think these things were proved," she said, more quietly and steadily. "Now I am going back to my husband and my child and my job. And I hope never to get into a courtroom again," she said, with one of her characteristic dazzling smiles.

Planning Trip to Europe.

The play, "Victoria Regina," which Miss Hayes left "with only the clothes on my back, thinking this would last two hours," will reopen in New York Aug. 31. Meanwhile the MacArthurs are going to Europe, where they will attend the Salzburg festival, she said.

MacArthur, joining his wife, said crisply: "I've said all I'm going to say. That was that I was glad I was the goat instead of Helen, and that I think 15 year old love letters should be outlawed in court."

Asked if he thought the court scene afforded good material for a play, he said: "No. Perhaps it has its theatrical aspects for others. I didn't enjoy any part of it."

"I never wanted a penny of Miss Hayes' money," said Miss Frink. "I just wanted a chance to tell my story."

Carol Wins Sympathy.

Throughout the extended cross-examination of Miss Frink the atmosphere in the courtroom was intense. Attorney Reeve, pale and perspiring, spoke his questions in a deliberate, low voice, skillfully changing from solicitousness to sarcasm when Miss Frink occasionally foiled him by readily admitting something, her obvious sincerity turning it to her own account.

This happened when Attorney Reeve asked: "And during all your troubles or upsets Charlie wrote you these sweet, beautiful letters?" On her admission that that was so, he went on: "Wasn't the only real trouble between you two just finances?"

"That," replied Miss Frink, "and his lack of responsibility. I wanted to do my part, but he wouldn't let me. I wanted to be a typical wife, but I didn't have a chance."

Flippancy Is Gone.

It was this note of simplicity, a certain transparency in her replies possibly revealing more than either attorney had expected to reveal, which typified Miss Frink on the witness stand, in contrast to her flippant recital of the day before.

During the dramatic cross-examination of MacArthur's former wife she admitted that she had loved him "until yesterday." Some of the questions asked her and her answers were:

ATTORNEY REEVE—And through it all Charlie wrote these beautiful letters to you [in the possession of her attorney, not offered in evidence]? A.—I think he always was very fond of me. I can't believe that he isn't right now.

Q.—He didn't ask you to file a bill for divorce? A.—No.

Q.—It was your own idea, to 'teach him a lesson,' you said? A.—Yes.

The previous day Miss Frink had said that Charlie told her he was a genius and would be hard to "domesticate." Mr. Reeve asked: "You think he is a genius, don't you?"

"I don't know," Miss Frink began dreamily. "Between nuttiness and genius there is such a fine line it's hard to tell. It would take a psychoanalyst to tell."

Then Attorney Reeve swiftly altered the line of questioning and the mood of the verbal exchange. Leaning forward, he asked her seriously:

"Do you love Charlie?"

Miss Frink stalled for a moment. "I love the memory of him at the time I married him," she said.

Q.—Do you love him today? A.—[Quickly]—I don't think I'd even like him as I saw him on the stand yesterday.

Q.—When did you cease loving Charlie? A.—When I saw him on the stand yesterday.

Admits Writing Letter.

Q.—Then when you wrote this letter to your sister Lola [handing her one] you did love Charlie? A.—Let me read it first.

Reading the letter, Miss Frink asked for a glass of water. A recess was declared, during which her attorney spoke to her. Cross-examination was resumed after five or ten minutes.

"Yes," she said, when court resumed, "that's my letter. I wrote it. I wouldn't admit it, but I still was in love with him then, too."

Q.—[Alluding to another letter written in 1923, after their separation] At the time you wrote this you felt great bitterness against Charlie? A.—Yes, because I had found a love letter he wrote to another woman——

Q. And you "hoped his small soul would burn in hell?" A.—I told him that. We said pretty extravagant things then. I didn't hope it.

Tries Sporting Gesture.

She reluctantly stopped reading another letter, some of which brought a refulgent smile to her face, and handed it back to her inquisitor, who asked her, concerning it:

Q.—When you wrote that you hoped that some good, simple woman would, after a reasonable pause, devote herself to Charlie? A.—I think I was trying to make a sporting gesture.

Q.—You wanted to convey the hope to Charlie that some good, simple woman——

Apparently unconscious of the staring court crowd, Miss Fink said in a low voice: "It was a response to something he'd said to me often enough—that he was sorry there wasn't some good, kind, responsible man to take care of me. I wrote that in sarcasm——

Q.—So you were being sarcastic when you wrote it? A.—Or magnanimous.

Q.—I think you were being magnanimous. If so, why did you change your mind? Do you think some good, simple woman has, as you hoped, devoted herself to Charlie? A.—I won't say anything against Miss Hayes, Mr. Reeve, and you can't make me.

Thinks Miss Hayes Sophisticated.

Q.—Will you say anything for her? A.—What do you want? I don't know that she's good, and I certainly wouldn't describe her as simple.

Q.—You do? A.—Yes, she must be worldly. She's traveled, she's lived most of her life on Broadway.

Q.—And you maintain a woman who's traveled and been on Broadway can't be a good, simple woman? A. [frantically]—I don't think Miss Hayes would like to be described that way. If you think she would, all right, I'll say it. I know I wouldn't want to be called a good, simple woman. What is it you want of me? Do you want me to wish them happiness?

Wishes Every One Happiness.

After Attorney Golan interrupted Mr. Reeve to whisper to him, the latter asked: "Your attorney suggests I ask you this: Did you wish them happiness?"

"Of course," said Miss Frink with a quick gesture of both hands, much the same as Miss Hayes used later in speaking of Miss Frink's "torture" on the stand, "I wish every one happiness."

"Including them?" persisted Attorney Reeve.

"Yes," she said weakly and burst into tears.

Miss Frink was becomingly dressed in a white sharkskin tailored suit, with a blouse of dubonnet, and a white hat of Breton shape, its turned up brim accentuating her short nose and giving her a youthful appearance.

Gives Hint of Motives.

Early in the day Miss Frink revealed on the witness stand some glimmering of the obscure motives which prompted her to bring the suit against the 35 year old actress. Attorney Golan had finished questioning her in direct examination, and Attorney Reeve began his cross-examination.

Some of the questions put to her, and her answers:

Q.—Is it your feeling that you are sorry you brought this case? A. [Firmly.]—No, I am not.

Q.—Then you still insist on this cause of action? A.—I think I have a right to tell my story. People have the wrong impression of me. I've been called a gold digger.

Q.—Having now told your story do you still insist on going on? A.—Yes.

Q. [Gently.]—Miss Frink, when you testified yesterday about Charlie's bringing you the orange for your breakfast, when you shared the upper berth on the train, what was behind that? A.—I was trying to show that I'd been through tough times with him, while we were dreaming of a rosy future, and laughing at our hardships.

DETECTIVES ADMIT THEY'RE BAFFLED IN KILLING OF HOSTESS

Frankly admitting that they had gained no tangible clew to the identity of the person who beat Mrs. Florence Thompson Bolin Castle to death in her room at the Devonshire hotel on Monday, investigators yesterday decided to follow new paths in their search.

First of all, they said, they would ignore the story told by the night club hostess' 7 year old son, James V. Thompson Jr., on the ground that it was fanciful and contradictory. The boy asserted that he saw a man, either a colored man or one blacked with grease paint, strike his mother on the head with a brick.

Three men and three women, who were taken into custody Friday for questioning, were all released by Capt. William O'Brien of the Chicago avenue police district yesterday. He said that he was satisfied none of them knew anything about the killing.

Funeral services for Mrs. Castle were held yesterday in a chapel at 2612 East 87th street. Among those who attended were the son and the woman's two divorced husbands, James V. Thompson Sr. of Revere, Mass., and Faber Castle, 7742 South Damen avenue. Burial was in the Oak Hill cemetery, Hammond.

HUSBAND'S TALE OF LOVE SCENE DENIED BY WIFE

Testifies in $300,000 Heart Balm Suit.

Miami, Fla., July 3.—(AP)—Petite Kathryn Crawford Edgar denied indignantly to a six man jury today her former husband's charges of indiscretions with Lewis E. Mallory III., young Pennsylvania oil heir.

Gaining the right to tell her story as a court witness, the blue eyed divorced wife of James Edgar Jr., testified as her own witness at Edgar's $300,000 suit against Mallory for alleged seduction and alienation of her affections.

She contradicted Edgar's testimony of seeing her nude in Mallory's room at a fashionable ocean front hotel. The Edgars were divorced a week ago today in Detroit.

Smart in a wool dress of mustard color with matching hat and accessories of green, Mrs. Edgar calmly but clearly detailed her movements at Miami Beach in March and then came to the highpoint of her narrative.

Denies Being in Room.

"Mrs. Edgar," said her attorney, S. Arthur Glickstein of New York, "it has been stated here that on five to ten occasions you were in Mr. Mallory's hotel room and committed certain acts of indiscretion. I want you to tell this jury whether you were ever in Mr. Mallory's room at any time."

"I was never in Mr. Mallory's room," the witness replied, blue eyes flashing.

"Did you ever commit any acts of indiscretion with Mr. Mallory in any other room?"

"I did not!"

Earlier in the day, Edgar, a dark young man of 27 years, underwent rigorous cross-examination by defense counsel on his story that he witnessed the hotel room love scene between his wife and Mallory.

Tells Story Again.

Attorney John Murrell of Mallory's counsel asked Edgar to describe again what he testified on direct examination he saw, by looking from the outside through a window, in Mallory's bedroom at the ocean front Hotel Deauville.

"I saw Mrs. Edgar and Mr. Mallory on the bed nude."

"Do you know what they were doing and what they were saying?"

"I couldn't tell what they were saying. They were holding each other."

"How do you know it was your wife lying in bed there?"

"Because I know my wife."

Edgar's case was rested after introduction of a translation of French and German song lyrics. Edgar said he found a sheet of Mallory's letterhead, on which had been typed the original words of the two songs, in his wife's desk.

NEW YORK CITY HAS RECORD EXODUS FOR WEEK-END HOLIDAY

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The Fourth of July exodus from the city appeared today to be in a fair way toward becoming the most enthusiastic holiday stampede that has taken place here in at least ten years. The last year when the Fourth of July and Saturday met on the calendar was 1931, a melancholy time that was not conducive to heavy travel. The holiday coincidence before that was in 1925, and in the decade since then no migration has taken place comparable with that of the last three days.

By tomorrow morning an estimated one and one-half million will have left the city pavements behind them. How many more will follow during the day depends on the weather.

All day today extra trains ground in and out of the city's terminals, extra planes rose from the airports, extra excursion ships glided up the river and down the bay, and countless buses and private cars streamed along the highways in all directions. And today was only the climax of an astonishing exodus that started as far back as Tuesday and left transportation services wondering if prosperity really had returned at last.

RAPIST ATTACK 3D IN 3 DAYS ON SOUTH SIDE

Girl Alone in Home Is Victim.

For the third day a rapist made an attack on the south side yesterday. The victim this time was an 11 year old girl, causing police and state's attorney's officials to redouble their efforts to apprehend the moron or morons who have committed the crimes.

The girl was attacked by a youth, described as being about 20 years old, 6 feet tall and wearing white trousers. The Chicago Lawn police said they believed he was the same rapist who attacked Mrs. Elsie Holzrichter, 25 years old, in her home at 6252 South Marshfield avenue on Thursday. The third woman victim, Mrs. Louise Henry, 21 years old, was raped in her apartment at 6145 Kenwood avenue in the presence of her husband Wednesday morning.

Leaves and Returns.

The girl was alone in her home yesterday when the youth appeared at the back door and inquired whether her mother was home. He was carrying a book salesman's folio, similar to one carried by Mrs. Holzrichter's assailant. When the girl said that she was alone he left and later returned, entering the home through the front door. He asked to see the gas meter and when he was shown the door leading to the basement he seized her and began to beat her.

After the girl had been dazed by his blows he raped her. She was taken to the Southtown hospital by neighbors after she had summoned their attention by crawling to the back door.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, ordered extra squads into the area from other districts after receiving a report of the assault.

Held to Grand Jury.

Edwin Sargent, 33 years old, 1945 Maple avenue, Evanston, an ex-convict, was ordered held to the grand jury by Judge Harry H. Porter in the Evanston Municipal court in bonds of $25,000 on a charge of raping an 11 year old girl in an abandoned coal yard near 1015 Church street, Evanston. He was paroled from the Joliet penitentiary in 1931 after he had served four years on three charges of burglarizing Evanston homes. He has been arrested 14 times on various charges since his parole.

MOTHER FOUND INSANE IN KILLING OF BABY IN TUB

Both state and defense agreeing that Mrs. Sarah Ballengee's mental condition precluded prosecution for the drowning on June 26 of her son, Harold Jr., 13 months old, a jury in Criminal court yesterday returned an instructed verdict of insanity in a brief hearing. Arrangements were made for her removal to the state asylum at Kankakee.

The hearing was in Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle's court. Mrs. Ballengee paid little or no attention to the proceedings. Her husband, a Winnetka real estate salesman, broke down as Dr. Harry Hoffman of the county behavior clinic, and Dr. Thomas L. Fentress, representing Mrs. Ballengee, testified she is a manic-depressive.

Mrs. Ballengee drowned her infant in a bath tub in her home at 1088 Elm street, Winnetka. Her explanation was that she considered herself and her two children a burden to her husband. She said she intended to kill both children and herself, but lost her courage.

CHICAGO BROKER IS SLUGGED ON EVANSTON VISIT

William T. Cline, 43 years old, 2130 Lincoln Park West, an insurance broker, was beaten by two men in front of the home of R. H. Woodland, 917 Edgemere court, Evanston, last night. The motive for the attack was obscure. One of the men, as he struck Cline, said: "That's for cutting my wife off at the corner." It was the opinion of Cline and of Woodland, who witnessed the slugging and went to Cline's assistance, that the motive of the men was robbery. Both fled on the approach of Woodland. At the time of the assault Cline was on his way to visit the Woodland home.

Door Jams, and Two Spend Eight Hours in an Elevator

J. V. Hunt, 277 Poplar street, Winnetka, president of a curtain concern at 10 West Jackson boulevard, and Thomas J. Bridgman, office manager, left for home at 10 o'clock Thursday night, but didn't arrive until yesterday morning. They were trapped in an elevator in the building when a door jammed until 6 a. m. yesterday.

Hotel Pays Up $776,505 Owed in Real Estate Taxes

Attorney Paul Moore yesterday paid over to County Treasurer Joseph L. Gill $776,505, representing delinquent and current real estate taxes on the Hotel La Salle for the years 1928 to 1934.

KILLED IN CRASH OF TRUCKS.

Litchfield, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—Seth Wright of St. Louis, Mo., driver for a trucking service, was killed here today in a head-on truck collision in a heavy fog. Albert Keiser of Nokomis, driver of the other truck, was seriously injured.

RUMANIANS UNITE TO RID NATION OF KING'S MISTRESS

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 3.—(AP)—A powerful triumvirate has entered the lists against Magda Lupescu, whom critics characterize as King Carol's "uncrowned queen."

One factor in this alliance is the students, who have announced their readiness to die to free the fatherland from "the corruption and degeneration" of Mme. Lupescu, her political "camarilla," and "tools of Jews and Freemasons."

Another is the Iron Guard party, which demands the return of former Queen Helen "so the country again will have a king, a queen, and an heir to the throne."

Form "Death Squads."

The third is the "All for the Fatherland" organization, which now includes Iron Guardists and many students, and which has formed its members into "death squads." Police charged, after the arrest of some members, that several persons had been marked by the squads for extinction.

But the flaming haired beauty, who is the daughter of a Jewish junk dealer, has in the last five years been the object of many such warnings, demands, plots, attacks, and campaigns. Her health is reported to be good and her influence with the monarch undiminished.

There are those, in fact, who have kind words to say about the king's red haired friend and who minimize the sinister nature which students' manifestations impute to her.

Ignore "Private Matters."

This is recognized by Gen. Zizi Cantacuzino, leader of the "All for the Fatherland" party, who, with Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, chief of the Iron Guard, said in an open letter to Police Prefect Gabriel Marinescu:

"Some of the affairs of Mme. Lupescu are entirely private and a matter of custom so far as the king is concerned.

"Lamentable though that may be, we do not bother ourselves about the details. But what have these private matters to do with the rôle that this lady plays, with the camarilla that she has about her, and the politicians who inject themselves into all state business?

"She can enjoy the favor of the king, but she should not play the rôle she is playing lest worthlessness attends all her activities."

Peasant Chief Upbraids King.

The Lupescu issue was brought to a sharp head by a speech at Alba-Julia in which Juliu Maniu, former premier and a leader of the peasant party, said:

"His majesty must give Prince Michael [his son] back to his mother, Queen Helen, who must rear him in the interest of Rumania."

He also called upon Rumanian women to resist the influence of Mme. Lupescu.

"Now her future shadows the throne of the king," he stated. "We won't tolerate it. We are not a nation of gypsies."

King Carol, who returned to the capital from a vacation, made no retort to Maniu's speech, and some observers speculated as to whether he would move to punish the powerful idol of Transylvanian farmers.

GRANDMOTHER IN DRUNKEN DRIVING CASE FIGHTS LAW

Phoenix, Ariz., July 3.—(AP)—Sentencing of a 54 year old Phoenix grandmother to 30 days in jail for driving an automobile while intoxicated launched a test today of constitutionality of Arizona's "drunk driving" law which makes a jail sentence mandatory.

The grandmother, Mrs. Florence Beebe, was given the minimum under the law.

Attorneys for Mrs. Beebe said they would ask the state Supreme court to pass on the validity of the statute.

CITY RUSE PRODS ELMWOOD PARK ON WATER DEBT

Promise to Pay After Pressure Is Cut.

About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the water pressure in the village of Elmwood Park was suddenly reduced. Residents of the suburb turned on their faucets, and in many cases got only a thin trickle.

John A. Cullerton, president of the village, knew the reason for the drop in pressure. The village buys its water from the city of Chicago, and owes the city $80,417 on a delinquent water bill. To prod its debtor, the city was making things uncomfortable in Elmwood Park.

Accompanied by the village attorney, Myron E. Wisch, President Cullerton dashed to the Circuit court of Judge George Fred Rush. They declared many residents of the village were unable to get water with the pressure reduced, and asserted lives and health were being imperiled. They asked for an injunction restraining the city from continuing its debt collecting method.

Promises to Settle.

Before Judge Rush had time to make a ruling, Mr. Cullerton telephoned to Oscar E. Hewitt, Chicago commissioner of public works, who had ordered the reduced pressure.

"We'll be in your office Wednesday with a written offer of a settlement," Mr. Cullerton promised.

Commissioner Hewitt promptly notified Thomas Geary, head of the water pipe extension bureau, that the war was over. Geary telephoned to his two employés stationed at the intake valves on Harlem avenue at Diversey and Fullerton avenues. Soon afterward water was gurgling at full pressure into the homes of Elmwood Park.

Take Health Precautions.

Commissioner Hewitt explained that his engineers had made several tests before the pressure was reduced, and had ascertained that cutting it to 4 pounds from the normal pressure of 18 to 20 pounds would raise water in each home about 9 feet above curb grade, and therefore would supply water without endangering health.

He instructed Acting City Engineer Loran D. Gayton to turn the valves wide open if a fire occurred in the village.

"The village claims that legally it owes the city nothing," said the commissioner, "on the ground that it has exceeded its bonded indebtedness under the constitution. Later we were informed that the village was willing to pay 50 cents on the dollar, apparently a charity donation."

Judgment Suit Pending.

Chicago has a suit for judgment against Elmwood Park pending in Circuit court before Judge Michael Feinberg. Last Saturday the judge denied the motion of attorneys for the village to dismiss the city's petition and gave the suburb ten days in which to file an answer.

Elmwood Park is one of six suburbs which owe the city a total of $425,000 for water. Yesterday's action did not include any of the others, which are: Cicero, owing $295,748; Summit, $20,900; Stickney, $17,733; Burnham, $8,749, and Calumet Park, $4,713. Some of these suburbs, it has been learned, recently have made efforts to settle their debts.

16,000 OF 30,000 AUTOS EXAMINED GET O. K. STICKER

Chicago's compulsory automobile inspection lanes had tested 30,000 passenger cars and trucks last night at the end of the third day of this service and O. K. stickers had been pasted on 16,000 windshields. Owners of the other 14,000 vehicles were told of adjustments and repairs that must be made within ten days to put their automobiles in a condition to cope with trafic emergencies.

The fourteen testing stations, at sites throughout the city, will be closed today and tomorrow. On Monday the service will continue. For the first few weeks, owners may have their machines inspected on the city apparatus at a time and place of their own convenience. Thereafter, notices will be mailed where and when to appear. Police will summons those who ignore the notices.

Under the ordinance, all automobiles registered in Chicago must receive an O. K. sticker every six months. There is no charge to the owners.

Gill yesterday asked the county board for authority to pay $11,550 in special assessment funds, plus interest and costs, to the village of Broadview to comply with an order of Judge Daniel P. Trude of the Circuit court. On June 20 Gill and Thomas D. Nash, former county treasurer, were adjudged guilty of contempt for failure to meet the order and were sentenced to the county jail until the payment was made. The court, however, granted a stay of sentence until July 15. The payment was originally ordered by Judge Trude in September, 1934.

CHUBBY LARDNER BEGINS SENTENCE PASSED IN 1922

Joliet Gets Slippery Chicago Criminal.

William [Chubby] Lardner, who until he fled Chicago in 1923 was one of the best known and least convicted criminals in the city, was sent to Joliet penitentiary yesterday to serve a 1 to 10 year sentence for shoplifting. The sentence was imposed 14 years ago by Judge Kickham Scanlan.

Though Lardner, known as "an immune" by virtue of the ease with which he evaded imprisonment, finally left the city to escape Judge Scanlan's sentence in 1922, the Chicago Crime commission kept track of him. In 1934 he was convicted of passing counterfeit money in Boston and was sentenced to three years in federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Seized at U. S. Prison.

Leavenworth authorities were notified of the sentence awaiting Lardner here. When he was eligible for release, Lardner was delivered to Cook county deputy sheriffs, who brought him to Chicago last week. He remained in the county jail until yesterday, when he made the trip to Joliet with a group of other men under sentence.

Lardner's long record began in 1914, when he was sentenced to 30 days in the Bridewell for receiving stolen property. For eight years he was a suspect in almost every crime of importance, but also lent his talents to such petty thievery as the rifling of telephone coin boxes and shoplifting. For stealing several valuable dresses he was arraigned before Judge Scanlan in 1922 and convicted. He filed an appeal and took this opportunity to escape.

With Hanged Bandit's Wife.

Mrs. Earl Dear, whose husband was hanged in 1919 for the murder of Richard Wolfe, a chauffeur, during a holdup, was Lardner's companion for the period between her husband's execution and Lardner's hasty departure from Chicago. Both were known as dope addicts and were suspects in the murder of Richard C. Tesmer in June, 1923. Tesmer was shot by the woman companion of a bandit who held him up as, with his wife, he was garaging his car at the rear of his home at 5835 Winthrop avenue.

Lardner last drew attention before his conviction on the counterfeit money charge as a suspect in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping. Federal agents failed to establish any complicity on his part.

THREE STAND MUTE WHEN ARRAIGNED IN BLACK LEGION PLOT

Detroit, Mich., July 3.—(AP)—Three men accused of aiding in a Black Legion conspiracy to kill a newspaper editor because of his political opinions stood mute on arraignment today.

R. Stanley Wilson, Highland Park councilman, today denied charges that he was a member of the Black Legion after Harvey Stonehouse and Arlington Jones, employés of the department of public works, testified that they were forced to join the Black Legion, and that Wilson held a revolver when the oath was administered.

At the risk of his life, Oscar Alf, 52 years old, 1804 Lake street, Evanston, foiled two masked robbers in the suburb yesterday and saved $600 belonging to him and five fellow employés whose checks he had just cashed.

Alf, an engineer at the Evanston hospital, got the money from the First National bank of Evanston and drove toward his home. In Lake street at Darrow avenue the robbers drew up alongside Alf's car, fired one shot that just missed him, and forced him to stop. One robber leaped on the running board and pointed a pistol at the engineer, who started his car suddenly, throwing the robber to the ground.

The second bandit fired two more shots into Alf's car. The two men leaped into their automobile and sped toward Chicago as Alf slumped over his steering wheel as though he had been wounded. Then, unhurt, he reported the incident to the police.

When arrested Thursday night at the wheel of an automobile belonging to Garnett Williams, 38 years old, of Indianapolis, Sanders said he was a hitchhiker. Policeman Frank McGovern testified Sanders stalled the car at 63d and Loomis streets, tying up trafic in four directions. Williams, who carried a loaded pistol, was charged with carrying a concealed weapon. Judge Gorman confiscated the gun and placed Williams on probation for a year.

For leaving the scene of an accident, Joseph Machalsky Jr., 26 years old, 2037 Custer street, was sentenced to serve five days. U. OF I. TO STUDY AUTO ACCIDENTS AND THEIR CAUSE

Will Keep Record of Student Driving.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Urbana, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois this autumn will inaugurate a research into the causes of trafic accidents and the efficacy of various methods to reduce the motor toll. In pursuance of this new endeavor, students this fall will be required to pass a driver's license examination to obtain a school permit to use an automobile and the cars will have to pass a mechanical test. Compulsory public liability and property damage insurance was initiated last year.

Will Keep Detailed Record.

"It is a function of this institution," said Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, president of the university, "to contribute what information it can to important questions confronting society. Automobile accidents have become a major social and economic problem.

"A detailed record will be kept of all available pertinent information concerning the operation of the approximately 300 automobiles for which student permits are issued. Because the school administration has better discipline over this group of drivers than any municipality or state can have over drivers at large, we should be able to obtain more information than the ordinary governmental agency.

"There may be some adverse criticism of our new activity. There is no guarantee that our efforts will produce anything of value to street safety engineers. There is no certainty that we will be able even to reduce accidents involving students' cars.

"This is a risk we can not dodge. The university's responsibility to aid in society's trafic toll problem is one that we cannot evade."

Dean of Men in Charge.

In direct charge of this new endeavor will be Dr. Fred H. Turner, dean of men. He has obtained the cooperation of the Illinois highway police in making the mechanical tests of student cars. He is corresponding with administrative officers of various state drivers' license laws before drafting the school's license regulations.

"It may be a year or maybe two years," said Dean Turner, "before we can get any conclusive information of general usefulness from the records of the driving of 500 students. In the meantime, however, we will be doing what we can to reduce the hazards for these students."

THE CONSTITUTION ANCHORS THE DECLARATION.

We come again to the celebration of the day when the doughty forefathers of this nation declared that they were done forever with one king in particular and all autocracy whatsoever, announcing their intentions to a candid world.

The news went out slowly, but ships were soon on their way with it from New York. The world addressed may not have been in great part candid, but it was in part shocked and in part interested. Europe knew that George III. was having American troubles and much of Europe hoped they would increase before they diminished. What may not have been realized at the time was that these men were now fighting not only against an oppressive government dominated by a willful ruler but for an idea, a new and startling idea, that people had inalienable rights and that no one could erect distinctions among them or create an inequality of privileges.

Before they began reciting what they did not like in the ruler who had abused them they stated what they expected of a government to which they would give their consent and which would require their consent before it could be a government. They then proceeded to tell the candid world what sort of royal person had driven them to dissolve their political bands with the mother country.

Later the rights, privileges and immunities they demanded in a free, equalitarian society were worked into the constitution defining the government which should serve them and remain as a protection of what they had won. One indictment of the autocratic ruler whose hand they shook from their shoulders was for "altering fundamentally the forms of our government."

Absolutism was showing few signs of cracking in Europe when the Americans declared they were forever done with it. Frederick the Great, Catherine II., Maria Theresa, Louis XVI., and the lesser potentates were either permitting the abuse of their subjects or doing the job themselves. A French biographer of Jefferson says the idea that the average man had the right to even the pursuit of happiness was too strange to be understood in lands where an escape from excessive misery and want was regarded as the extreme for human optimism. It could go no further.

When the Americans had won their freedom the question soon rose, Could they keep it? The answer did not seem to be yes. Again the genius of the people rallied the disordered elements of liberty and brought forth another work, the fundamental law of the land. The French paid for trifling with American ideas, but their own revolution culminating with Napoleon shattered Europe but did not preserve republics. There had been only a convulsion, probably with a net gain slowly to be realized.

Whenever people in Europe have struggled to emancipate themselves they have missed, even in their moment of success, their objective. They have failed to grasp, as they reached out, the rock to which they could tie themselves. They have gone forth and back over it as if with the tides. The convulsions have been many, but each one of them has left most of the candid world addressed by the congress of the thirteen United States of America July 4, 1776, where it was before.

Autocracy prevails with greater violence now and inspires greater fears in most of Europe than it did one hundred and sixty years ago when the word reached the courts that the colonies of George III. of Great Britain had declared that men had inalienable rights, that they were created equal and the United States was free from usurpations of power.

The declaration was a bold thing. The war made it good. The constitution made it last.

AIR FREIGHT.

The announcement of the General Air Express that it is considering the operation of cargo planes between Chicago and the coasts will remind TRIBUNE readers of a series of articles and editorials in which air freighters were suggested. The airplane will not reach the zenith of public service until it enters the freight field, and the rapid evolution of the airplane appears to simplify the expansion. Perfectly good passenger ships are outmoded annually by scientific research and the efforts of the various lines to reproduce in the air all of the conveniences of land travel. Such machines can be converted into freight carriers with little cost.

It is idle to speculate on what trafic will be available because in doing so one inadvertently thinks in terms of railway commodities. Commerce does not thus desert one form of transportation for another. Business is created or altered by the efficiency of the agencies of carriage available. Packets and canal boats served Chicago before the railroad era, but they did not carry fresh meats to the Atlantic seaboard nor bring fruits from the Gulf of Mexico. Railway freight service, in its turn, developed a heavy trafic in perishable commodities, but it remained for the express companies to satisfy the public demand for the more luscious fruits, the delicacies of the seashore, and expedited transit for articles of great value. In like manner, air freight will create a new commerce. It's a "natural."

VACANT LOTS.

The cleaning and leveling of vacant lots in Chicago by the WPA has caused a good deal of amusement in recent months. Sometimes it took a swarm of men three or four days to finish a job which a man and a boy, armed with a little energy, could have completed in half the time. There was much shovel-leaning and just plain resting.

The laughter was merited and so is a certain indignation at subsequent happenings. The lots at length were tidied. Tin cans, waste paper, superannuated corsets and shoes and a great many other discarded objects were burned or removed. Weeds were cut down. The appearance of many neighborhoods was greatly improved.

Much of that improvement has since been lost. The vacant land is again being used as a dumping ground, and the fact that there are now fewer weeds to obscure the refuse has made matters a good deal worse.

City life imposes responsibilities upon city dwellers, as everybody should know, but many evidently do not. Informal as well as formal neighborhood organization for the improvement of the appearance of the city should be encouraged and police coöperation should be available if required. There is no excuse for using vacant lots as public dumps and those who do so deserve to be ostracized for a first offense and jailed for a second.

A PATRIOTIC RITE.

The patriotic pageant and program presented by the Cook County council of the American Legion at Soldiers' field last Independence day was so well received that the Legion has arranged similar entertainment for this evening. Citizens planning their holiday will do well to include this brilliant and inspiring spectacle. Young and old will enjoy it as a splendid show but also as a patriotic rite, an emotional experience renewing our pride in the nation, a commemoration of great deeds by Americans in hours of fiery trial.

Commenting upon this event last year we said: "The American people have heard more sour criticism and detraction of America in the last three years than any past generation has had to put up with. It is a service to patriotism and to truth that the Legion has prepared this celebration and it will be gratefully appreciated by all loyal Americans. It is well to be reminded of the glory of our nation at this time when demagogs and charlatans, rabble rousers and advocates of alien schemes of government are trying to undermine the American people's loyalty and faith in our own institutions."

Since that was printed there has been a noteworthy change in the political tactics of the campaign against Americanism. The cranks and extremists persist in their slander and distortions. Practical politics has taken warning. Patriotic citizenship has let it be known that it will not tolerate this fraudulent attack upon American morale. It is no longer good politics. The new revolutionists have been sent to the rear. Patriotic phrases now decorate the rhetoric of the administration appeals and declarations of devotion to the institutions which were announced as failures incapable of meeting the difficulties of our present hour.

The party in power, in short, has heard from the American people that they intend to remain American. This transformation in tactics from open attack on American morale to bogus patriotism has been forced by the patriotic organizations, conspicuously the Legion, and by the loyal press. But the purpose of subversion remains and with it the need for the defense of Americanism remains. Insidious attack is more dangerous than the arrogant attack which the New Deal in its days of affluent power was encouraged to make. Its defeat lies in the citizen's devotion to his priceless heritage and his determination to protect and perpetuate it.

That heritage is not merely or chiefly one of material benefits, though they have been unequaled in any other country. It is a heritage of the spirit, and it must be preserved in the spirit of our people. In this high service to the country the Legion has stood in the front rank. Its celebration of the nation's glory on Independence day is an appeal to American loyalty and pride of country which comes with special force and meaning from men who have kept the faith in the hour of trial.

The celebrations of Independence day throughout the land will have a special significance this year in the midst of a great campaign for the preservation of American principles of government and the freedom they have preserved for nearly a century and a half.

Editorial of the Day

THE MORE ABUNDANT LIFE.

[Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argus-Leader.]

It is, indeed, startling to learn that in the first four months of 1936 Americans purchased more pork produced in foreign countries than in any like period in our history.

Omcial reports of the United States department of commerce tell the dismal story.

In January, February, March, and April of 1936 Americans bought 10,151,102 pounds of foreign pork—about seven times as much as the importations of last year and 20 times the imports of two years ago.

Live hog imports also increased substantially, amounting to 5,186,576 pounds in the first four months of this year compared to 35,953 pounds in the corresponding period a year ago.

As we contemplate the eloquent utterances at Washington in regard to "a more abundant life" we wonder how it is to be achieved. Certainly we cannot have more by producing less, as we have done under the odd agricultural policies of the New Deal.

When the farmer produces fewer hogs he has less to sell. There is a smaller load for the trucker who hauls them to market. There is less business for the packing plants and less employment for the workers. The railroads, too, suffer.

It is well that the platform adopted by the Republican party speaks directly against the program of scarcity. The time has come when we must reverse the program that has prevailed if we are to avoid economic stagnation.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. Reg. U. S. Pat. Office

"BUT IT WILL avail him naught," said the omnipresent Mr. Hamilton, the very busy national secretary of the G. O. P., in speaking of some of the dark, nefarious plans of Mr. Farley. Oh, Mr. Hamilton, I wish you wouldn't say "it will avail him naught." It's a trifle erudite for us denizens of the prairie states and, besides, it always sounds to me like "throw the cow over the fence some hay."

"ARE YOU INSANE?" asked a man out west of Representative Zioncheck, en route to Seattle, and Mr. Zioncheck wittily retorted, "Are you sane?" A very pertinent question for one and all of us. Are you sane? You may say yes, but how do you know? I remember an eccentric individual who used to electrify dinner parties at the rare times he was invited by pointing a finger at each guest in turn and demanding, "Are you sane?" They would look uncomfortable and murmur, "Well, I think so," or "Why, yes, of course," or something like that. Then the man would shout triumphantly, "Ha, ha! you aren't sure! But I know I am sane and can prove it. I've been sent before the courts five times to be tried on charges that I was insane. And every time I was acquitted. So I can prove I'm sane. Can you?" Which brings us back to the question, Are you sane? And can you prove it?

FOURTH OF JULY.

Hear the gallant cannon
Booming bang away.
See the lovely rockets—
Independence Day!

Would thou couldst have heard 'em
Nineteen Fourths agone . . .
With the gray faced infantry
Reddened by the dawn.

Would thou couldst have seen 'em
Playing in the sky,
Signaling to men beneath
Holiday to die.

There as Soissons' fête day
Roared in from the North
We lay wondering, as now,
What means July the Fourth?

DANIEL C. GIBBONS-POSTMAN.

TODAY, THEN, is the Fourth of July! In spite of all the entreaties and warning and frantic pleas, the American patriots whose great-grandfathers freed us from the cruel shackles of King George III. will be up and doing. One of them tossed a firecracker in my general direction yesterday and when I gently objected he said, "Ah, minda yer own beez," and his cunning little companion said, "Makka de cheer for libertee, you beeg steef." I wish that when I had been a small boy that instead of wanting to be a policeman or President of the United States I had yearned to be a coal miner. Then today I would be away down in the depths of the earth, perhaps six hundred feet or more, disturbed by no noise but the tapping of my little pick into the pretty soft coal.

AND THEY CALL THIS the land of the free and the great Statue of Liberty stands right there in New York harbor to welcome Americans back to their own country. Yes, and Americans returning with glad hearts to their homes last Saturday were stopped at the customs and told they couldn't bring in free the hundred dollars' worth of hootch they had bought abroad, but could only fetch in the equivalent of a wine gallon. What's the use of going abroad if you can't bring in any more than a gallon of likker? Why, just the family can lap that up in two or three days. Land of the free! And you can only bring in a gallon of hootch! As the anguished moans of the returning travelers smite on the ears of the Statue of Liberty I wouldn't be a bit surprised to hear that she had jumped right off of Bedloe's Island and committed suicide in the dark, oily depths of New York harbor.

THE YEARS AND THE ROSE JAR.

The little jar gleams softly on the table—
Its white curves splashed with cherry, brown, and tan,
To stroke a tiny bit of his Japan.

In flowers, birds, of course the mountain peak;
It pleases even though I can't help knowing
The thing is just a second rate antique.

But deep within my heart it is a treasure—
The place where all one's finest treasures are;
Far back from where my memory can measure,
Down through the years has always been this jar.

The growing years that danced along so sweetly,
Those happy years that laughed and slipped away;
And always in the home love ruled completely,
The jar stood on the table—as today.

To breathe the dry rose petals resting there,
And felt the fragrance softly rise and hover
As first it spread on some June's heady air.

Yet leaves untouched what memory endears,
Undying as the scent of withered roses
And tender as a smile akin to tears.

And though the flying years must keep on winging,
And what is gone may often leave a scar,
To me life's earlier sweetness still is clinging
Among the fragrant petals in that jar.

AND AFTER the smoke of battle clears away tonight from this Fourth of July celebration Capt. Nathan Hale, standing on the banks of the Styx looking over at us, will probably say to Gen. Israel Putnam: "I was lucky, after all, in being in the Revolutionary war instead of living over there in these days. I just got hanged for being a spy, which is a lot better than getting my face blown off by Chinese firecrackers." R. H. L.

NOISE—A DANGEROUS NUISANCE.

WHENEVER we become excited or filled with enthusiasm we cheer, shout, or laugh loudly. The demonstration by a body of troops when making a charge is an index of determination as well as an effort to bolster courage. Martial music has the same effect. When the ill-fated lieutenant colonel of the 7th cavalry, George A. Custer, charged the Cheyennes under Black Kettle at the battle of the Washita, the regimental band sounded the stirring notes of "Garry Owen." During frontier days in the west groups of cowboys would ride into town shrieking, yelling, and firing pistols—all designed to announce their arrival with fitting bravado.

At best, noise is disconcerting, annoying, disagreeable, except on occasions when it expresses the heights of emotion—joy and elation. We celebrate the dawn of American independence with the burning of much gunpowder. It is the one time in the year when we voice our unswerving devotion to the ideals of those who, with high courage and farsighted wisdom, framed the constitution and laid the foundations of our government. Let patriotic vociferousness be the rule on the birthday of the nation!

Purposeless boisterousness on the part of human beings nowadays is usually a manifestation of lack of control. But it is the incessant, continuous, day-in-and-day-out roar and rumble that constitute a real menace not only to the delicate machinery of the ear but to the general health. Several years ago the British Medical association resolved unanimously to support all measures for the suppression of unnecessary din. The resolution stated categorically that extraneous, raucous sounds may be termed a nuisance within the meaning of the public health act.

City dwellers have become accustomed to a certain amount of noise, but not without paying a price. Nervous systems have been damaged, ears have been injured, and a large population has been compelled to exist in a situation needlessly hazardous. The incessant sounding of motor car horns, the clanging of street car bells, the noises of trucks with loads unevenly balanced, the shouts of venders, all lead us to pray: "From the unnecessary clatter of human activities, good Lord, deliver us!"

Not long ago I read that a certain Prof. Thingumsquizzle had disclaimed the bad influence of noise; that by some set of measurements he had found that, regardless of the strength and repetitious character of sounds, they were without effect. Perhaps Herbert Spencer's remark, "You may gauge a man's intellectual capacity by the degree of his intolerance of unnecessary noise," may apply. Schopenhauer, the German philosopher, once said, "Noise is the true murderer of thought."

It is possible to cultivate a tolerance for noise, but in doing so sensitivity to delicate sounds is lost. Some people are actually unhappy unless they are surrounded by hubbub that is more or less continuous; in other words, the party is a failure unless it is a "riot" from start to finish. Such people wear out quickly, develop neuroses, or acquire a sort of petrified nervous system.

Let us look at the other side of the picture. Why do people build homes in the country, or seek residences in the suburbs? To secure more fresh air, to see more green things, to enjoy more sunshine? Yes, in part; but they do so primarily to escape the roar and rush of the city, to be able to sleep after sundown, and to obtain absolute quiet. They find improvement in health and nervous stability as a result of uninterrupted rest.

It has been shown that constant noise produces thickening of the drum membranes of the ears. Thus they become less resilient, less capable of movement. Furthermore, the nerve of hearing is exhausted with repeated assaults of sound. These are real factors in the production of partial deafness. Factory workers occasionally find great relief through plugging the external ear canals with bits of cotton. The sudden bursting of an inflated paper bag, in the vicinity of almost any one, will raise the blood pressure in the brain to four times its normal level for several seconds.

Soundproofing has come none too soon, but little relief will be afforded by insulated buildings if we permit avoidable racket on our streets.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

The contest of the colonies with Great Britain [the revolutionary war] claimed a total of 4,044 Americans killed and 6,004 injured.

During the last thirty years accidents caused by fireworks have resulted in 4,290 fatalities and more than 96,000 injuries. While these figures are startling they do not paint the entire picture, as drownings and trafic accidents are not included.

On this birthday of the nation we permit children to play with explosives known to be dangerous. Here are a few "don'ts":

Do not throw firecrackers at any one.
Do not explode them under bottles.
Avoid toy pistols.

Powder burns are dangerous, as tetanus [lockjaw] may follow even a slight wound. Wash all injured skin surfaces gently with soap and water until they are thoroughly clean. Then cover with a piece of dry gauze [sterile]. Do not use ointments or salves of any kind.

If an injury to the eye occurs consult a physician without delay.

Spend the Fourth in the open. In the evening attend a public fireworks display managed by experts.

ICED WATER.

D. J. D. writes: Is the drinking of a quart or more of iced water during the principal meal of the day harmful and, if so, why?

REPLY.

Yes. In the first place the quantity is excessive. Furthermore, cold contracts the capillaries of the lining of the stomach, causing digestive disturbances sooner or later.

REDUCING DIET.

D. C. C. writes: You advised proper diet as one method of reducing a large abdomen. Please suggest a menu.

REPLY.

Exercise and diet offer a way out of your dilemma. A fairly comprehensive dietary program will be sent if you will inclose a stamped, addressed envelope with your request.

TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA

DAY BY DAY IN THE MAKING OF THE CONSTITUTION

Philadelphia, Pa., July 4, 1787.—[The convention in adjournment to celebrate the anniversary of independence; no report by Madison.] Gen. Washington visited Dr. Abraham Chovet on Race street to see his exhibit of anatomical figures and then went to hear at the Calvinist church an oration on the anniversary of independence delivered by a Mr. Mitchell, a student of law.

The Founders Celebrate the Fourth of July

The committee elected by ballot, one from each state, to report a method of representation which might conciliate the difference of opinion existing between the large states and the small, threatening to dissolve the convention and the confederacy, has agreed upon a report, which is as follows:

"That the subsequent propositions be recommended to the convention on the condition that both shall be generally adopted. First, that in the first branch of the legislature each of the states now in the Union be allowed one member for every 40,000 inhabitants of the description reported in the seventh resolution of the committee of the whole house.

[The seventh resolution as reported from the committee of the whole provided that the rights of suffrage in the first branch of the national legislature ought to be according to some equitable ratio of representation, namely, in proportion to the whole number of white and other free citizens and inhabitants, of every age, sex, and condition, including those bound to servitude for a term of years and three-fifths of all other persons not comprehended in the foregoing description, except Indians not paying taxes in each state.]

"That each state not containing 40,000 inhabitants shall be allowed one member; that all bills for raising or appropriating money shall originate in the first branch of the legislature and for fixing the salaries of the officers of the government of the United States shall originate in the first branch of the legislature and shall not be altered or amended by the second branch; and that no money shall be drawn from the public treasury but in pursuance of appropriations to be originated in the first branch.

"Second, that in the second branch each state shall have an equal vote."

This report was founded on a motion of Dr. Franklin in committee and was barely accepted by the members of states opposed to an equality of votes in the senate.

Upon the decision reached on this conciliation of opinion may depend the future of the American Union of independent states. The convention will enter upon the debate tomorrow.

Q.—Has the amount of wheat the United States sells to foreign countries declined since Roosevelt came into office?

A.—In 1932 this country sold 54,879,484 bushels of wheat abroad. In 1935 we sold 232,965 bushels to foreign countries. Almost the entire market for wheat has been lost. Last year we imported over 27,000,000 bushels.

Q.—Has the AAA paid more than $10,000 in wheat benefits to any one person?

NAME CALLING.

Yankton, S. D., June 29.—This morning as I came down to work I heard a little girl shout defiance across the street at a little boy with the anathema of youth: "Pie face, cross-eyed, knock-kneed, bow-legged," etc.

Saturday night I heard his excellency the President of the United States shout defiance at those Americans who are exercising their constitutional privilege of opposing him with the anathema of the demagog, "economic royalists," "economic autocrats."

It struck me that he was using exactly the same high order of intelligence as displayed by the little child.

Those Americans who received his blessing at Philadelphia are those men who make the jobs for the 80 odd per cent of the population still employed; and pay the major share of the taxes to care for the remaining 20 per cent.

That they may make more and better pay rolls till relief is but another chapter of history demands that they be given the fullest coöperation of government. Blaspheming of the man who makes the job by the President simply scares American business into making less jobs and throwing more Americans into the hands of Harry Hopkins.

HARRY A. ROBINSON.

Joliet, Ill., July 1.—Why doesn't President Roosevelt name these "economic royalists" and other big bad boys of business whom he has been talking about these last four or five years and who, he would have the ignorant, distracted, unthinking men and women of America believe, are crushing them? Because he can't, "there ain't no such animal."

There is scarcely a big industry or business in our country today that is not captained by some chap who started out as a poor boy with no other advantage than the opportunity that America has always given to any one with ambition, industry, and intelligence. This is true, also, of the men even in the higher subordinate positions.

If there are any "economic royalists" in our country it would be these fellows like Franklin D. Roosevelt and his wealthy yachtsman friend, Vincent Astor, who inherited every dollar that they have; but taking America over, there are very few of these. The smart poor boys in a few generations take most of them down, which is as it should be.

BUSES VS. STREET CARS.

Chicago, June 27.—In answer to Peter C. Latsis' letter in regard to modern buses instead of modern street cars:

A ride on rails is the smoothest ride there is. All a person has to do is go and look at some car line where there is no bus or truck trafic and you will see that it is the buses and trucks that tear up the streets.

If there is no difference in the new experimental cars, why is it that when they are in service everybody waits for them?

In regard to tying up trafic, which would tie up trafic more, the 3,000 street cars now in service or the 10,000 buses it would take to handle the people who ride the street cars? EUGENE F. DEUTSCH.

LEAGUE IN PANIC AS JEW SHOOTS SELF IN GALLERY

Czech Writer Fires Bullet Into His Chest.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, July 3.—The crack of a pistol shot threw a solemn session of the league of nations assembly into a panic today.

Statesmen were speaking at length on the best steps to take to avert war in Europe when Stefan Lux, a Jewish newspaperman from Czechoslovakia, pulled a pistol from his pocket in the gallery and fired a fatal bullet into his chest.

"I want to die as a public protest to the way Germany is treating Jews," he gasped as he fell to the floor. "I am not sorry. My mind is completely lucid."

Van Zeeland Calms Delegates.

The assembled statesmen leaped to their feet as the shot ran out. They feared an assassin was attempting to kill one of their colleagues. Some shouted at the tops of their voices. One of the few calm men in the hall was Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium, president of the assembly.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen, let us continue," he shouted above the hubbub.

Guards of the league's $10,000,000 palace rushed to the gallery and removed the wounded man to a hospital where he died of an internal hemorrhage several hours later.

Helen Kirkpatrick of New York and Rochester, N. Y., who is attached to the American research center at Geneva, was standing near Lux when he fired the pistol. Just before the Czech newspaper man fired, she said, he cried out:

Letter Addressed to King.

At the hospital Lux pleaded with attendants to recover his brief case. Authorities searched the case and found letters addressed to King Edward VIII. of England, Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and J. A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the league.

After order was restored in the assembly Avenol expressed his apology for the incident.

Kirstim Hesselgren of Sweden and the first woman to address the assembly as a delegate, was then recognized by Premier Van Zeeland. She said her words were intended to emphasize the anguish of the women of all nations in the present troubled situation of the world.

"Why bear children into a world so hopeless and so insecure?" the white haired delegate asked. "I have listened to all your speeches and have found no ray of hope in them. The reality which we must face is that more than 50 nations are letting one small one fall. How can any small nation henceforth have any hope?

Voices Fear of War.

"Might not this readiness to sacrifice a small and weak victim turn war loose in deadly earnest?"

The session proved to be another day of oratory. Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France demanded a reformation of the league and the inclusion of iron clad region security pacts as well as measures to assure the punishment of an aggressor in war.

After several hours of speech making Van Zeeland announced the discussion of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia was at an end.

Draft Resolution on "Grab."

Assembly leaders then began working on a resolution dealing with Italy's annexation of the African empire. Latin American nations fought for the inclusion of a paragraph which would condemn all annexations obtained by force.

They were opposed by European leaders who do not want to offend Italy to the point where Premier Mussolini would carry out his threat of quitting the league.

The lifting of sanctions from Italy is taken for granted. They probably will be removed officially July 15.

ETHIOPIA'S WAR TACTICS USED BY PALESTINE ARABS

Battle British and Jews with Snipers.

[This is the third of four stories about the trouble in the Holy Land.]

BY EDWARD J. NEIL.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

JERUSALEM, June 21.—[By Airmail and boat to New York.]—Palestine and Ethiopia—one of cradle of Christianity, the other Africa's last savage empire—are national brothers under the skin.

Ethiopia is off the front pages as a war story, but the black remnants of Haile Selassie's empire are sniping still at the fringes of Premier Mussolini's massive army. A shot here and there, the swift and flashing arc of a curved sword, a few trucks ambushed, drivers killed, supplies looted. The kind of war which will go on for years.

Old Struggle Flares Anew.

Here in the Holy Land the old struggle of the Jew and Arab is burning anew. Here, too, the symptoms are the same: The snapping of scattered rifles from behind the rocks, the trees, and the walls.

They call the situation a "general strike" of Arabs, and Britain has mustered some 10,000 soldiers, many airplanes and tanks to bolster the 2,000 police on duty in Jerusalem. But to eyes which have been watching Italians fight Ethiopians and vice versa for eight months, it looks strangely like the scene in East Africa.

Arabs Battle for Freedom.

Determined as never before in the rebellions of 1929 and 1933, the Arabs apparently have settled down to a last ditch struggle for the freedom they claim Great Britain promised them as a reward for revolt against the Turks during the Levantine phase of the world war.

The battle lines draw tighter around the triangle which reaches through the olive groves, the hills, the valleys, the holy places of Biblical times.

They take in the trenches, now sometimes manned in the night by Arabs, where the Turks made their last stand against the late Gen. Edmund Allenby's British troops.

It isn't war yet. But tomorrow anything may happen.

ARABIC NEWSPAPERS BANNED IN PALESTINE; TROOPS ROUT SNIPERS

JERUSALEM, July 3.—(AP)—All Arabic newspapers in Palestine were under government suspension today. Al Liwa and Falastin, the only two still publishing after previous successive shutdown orders, were included in the general suspension on charges of disturbing the peace of the country.

Sabotage and sniping continued last night. One Jew was seriously wounded, five Arabs were arrested, and five horses were killed. The sanitarium at Arza, outside Jerusalem, which had been a target for snipers almost nightly, was again attacked last night. Troops drove off the assailants with a machine gun, and pursued them into a nearby village where two Arabs with rifles were arrested.

Snipers attacked a number of settlements surrounding Jerusalem and also Mekor Chaim, Beit Began, Romema, Dfar Nachaman, Rishon-le-Zion, and Moledeth, south of Beer Jacob.

Jerusalem accepted a quota of $100,000 for the campaign to aid the victims of the disorders. Every Jew is being asked to contribute half his monthly earnings.

RUSSIA, GERMANY REJECT BID TO JOIN NAVY PACT

British Plan to Build Bigger Warships.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 3.—More tangles in the international naval situation as the result of Japan's decision to have nothing to do with the London naval treaty negotiated here last winter were disclosed today.

In the first place, the Anglo-Russian talks to arrange for Russian adherence to the naval pact, which was signed last March by the United States, Great Britain and France, have been discontinued. No further dates for meetings have been fixed.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign commissar, have reviewed the whole ground of the naval treaty at Geneva, it was said here. A plan for Germany's adherence to the principles of the naval pact, which was being negotiated, also has gone by the board.

Britain to Build Battleships.

The second consequence of scuttling the naval pact will be the construction of battleships of much greater displacement than 35,000 tons—the present limit under treaties expiring this year. This year's London treaty called for limiting guns to fourteen inches, conditional upon Japan's adherence.

Lacking that adherence, the British, like the Americans, are going ahead with sixteen inch guns and admiralty technicians say it is impossible to build efficient sixteen inch guns on a battleship with a 35,000 ton displacement.

It was disclosed that Japan's decision made necessary the revision of plans on two new battleships which will be laid down here next January. It is believed the new designs include specifications for much larger tonnage. How much larger this will be no one knows. During the naval conversations last winter there was speculation that battleships might go as high as 60,000 tons.

See Bigger U. S. Warships.

The British believe that the announcement of Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations of the United States navy, that American battleships will be equipped with sixteen inch guns means that the new American battleships also will go over the 35,000 tons limit. Consequently, all around increases in size—and expense—of warships are anticipated.

By way of striking a proper attitude, the British pretend to deplore the American decision to adopt maximum caliber guns.

THREAT TO TAKE OVER RAILROADS IS MADE BY SPAIN

Workers Drop General Strike Plans.

MADRID, July 3.—(AP)—A government threat to nationalize railways caused rail workers to abandon plans tonight for a general strike as scattered political disorders claimed five more lives.

A government spokesman, following a special cabinet session devoted to discussing labor problems, said 13 of the 14 demands made by rail workers had been granted by the operators but that the 14th, asking wage increases, had been refused on the grounds it would bankrupt the lines.

Three deaths occurred when a group of unidentified men entered the Café Roig, a Fascist meeting place, and opened fire with a submachine gun, two men falling mortally wounded, one dropped dead of heart disease, and four were wounded. The assailants escaped.

Socialist dairy workers leaving a meeting met a hail of gunfire. Two were killed and four were seriously wounded.

Huri Bombs at Colonel.

In Barcelona an attempt was made on the life of Col. Crispulo Moracho who successfully defended Commander Perez Farras in his trial for participation in the October, 1934, revolt. Assailants hurled two bombs as the colonel left his home. One fell short, the other failed to explode.

Meanwhile the tribunal of guarantees announced a 20 day period would be granted employers' associations in which to make a report to Spain's highest court on the labor situation.

The announcement came after persistent reports the tribunal would uphold the employers' appeal against the government decree which forced the reinstatement and reimbursement of nearly 100,000 workers who were discharged during the 1934 rebellion.

Should the tribunal uphold an appeal on the decision it will be the second severe legal blow to the new leftist government. The court previously overruled the government decree declaring Fascist organization in Spain illegal.

To Build New Prison.

Following the special cabinet meeting it was announced a new prison will be built at Burgos for political offenders. The jails that were emptied recently by the amnesty decree following the leftist election are nearly filled again as a result of new political and labor clashes.

In some sections boats have been pressed into service as prison ships. The new Burgos prison would accommodate nearly 4,000 prisoners.

JAPAN EXECUTES ARMY MAN FOR SLAYING GENERAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, July 3.—Saburo Aizawa, former lieutenant colonel in the Japanese army who was sentenced to death for the murder last year of Maj. Gen. Tetsuzan Nagata, was executed by a firing squad, the war office announced at noon today. Nagata was director of the military affairs bureau of the war office.

All further details were banned. Tremendous interest was taken in the case. It was generally believed the verdict in Aizawa's case indicates drastic measures will be taken against the leaders of the army rebellion of Feb. 26.

Twenty officers who were involved in the uprising are under arrest. Information as to whether their trial has been started has not been made public. It is generally felt that a public announcement will be made in a few days, and that martial law, which was proclaimed Feb. 26, will be lifted in mid-July.

TWO CLAIM TO BE FATHERS OF HUSKY TRIPLETS

Miami, Fla., July 3.—(AP)—Two men, both claiming to be the father of boy triplets born here last Oct. 2, will attempt to establish their parenthood before the Palm Beach county Circuit court.

Louis D. Pierre of Miami, one of those calling the husky 9 month old children his sons, filed habeas corpus proceedings today in an effort to force their mother, Mrs. Lois Miller, and her husband, T. J. Miller, to give up the boys.

Miller, who also claims he is the children's father, married their mother, Mrs. Lois Johnson, last February after she obtained a divorce from her first husband.

REFEREE GRANTS $1,800,000 CLAIM TO N. Y. WIDOW

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Mrs. Florence W. E. Richards, widow of Eugene Land Richards, former New York superintendent of banks, has won her fight for $1,800,000, if Supreme court Justice Charles Lockwood accepts the report of Special Referee Joseph J. Baker, made today.

Mr. Baker was appointed to hear testimony in Mrs. Richards' suit against the National Investors corporation and the Guardian Detroit company to recover that amount from the estate of her late husband.

A lower court decision against her was reversed by the Appellate division, which held that Mrs. Richards was entitled to an accounting of the income from her husband's interest in the two firms.

Mrs. Richards' husband had acted, she said, as an important adviser and had helped organize the companies. The defendants denied that the late Mr. Richards had played any important part in forming the companies.

Mr. Baker's report, if accepted, gives Mrs. Richards a widow's rights in the two firms.

Denies 20 Were Killed in Wreck of German Train

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 3.—The propaganda ministry today denied rumors that twenty persons were killed when a new Diesel motored train, the Flying Breslauer, was derailed near Guben Sunday. It was admitted the train jumped the rails while racing from Berlin to Breslau. Propaganda authorities, however, insisted there were no casualties.

Educators Pick Detroit as 1937 Convention City

Portland, Ore., July 3.—(AP)—The National Education association selected Detroit, Mich., today as the site for the organization's 1937 convention.

STILL EXPLODES; MOTHER KILLED, 2 GIRLS BURNED

Mrs. Lucille Bonato, 40 years old, was fatally injured and her two daughters, Virginia, 14 years old, and Lorraine, 9, were seriously burned in a fire which followed the explosion of a still in the basement of their home at 10761 South Western avenue. The husband and father of the victims helped firemen rescue one of the little girls and then disappeared. Police began a search for him and for his 18 year old son, who also fled from the scene.

Mrs. Bonato and Lorraine were carried down a ladder by firemen and Virginia was rescued by Fireman Frank Bailey of engine company 120, who found her unconscious on a stairway. All were taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital, where the mother was found to be dead. Virginia was revived with an inhalator, but her condition was said to be serious.

Fire Chief Milton Hensli of the 17th battalion said the fire and explosion caused $1,500 damage to the two story brick house, which had been leased by the Bonatos three months ago. In a garage behind the house the Morgan Park police found an automobile filled with empty alcohol cans.

ENGINEER HIT BY ROCK; TRAIN OF QUEEN STOPPED

LILLE, France, July 3.—(AP)—A flying rock hit an engineer on the head today, stopping the train carrying the Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, but police declared it "a simple accident."

"A nonessential section of the machinery became detached, fell on the gravel and threw up stones which injured the engineer slightly," the prefecture announced.

The train was only slightly delayed and the same engineer took it on to Calais. There Queen Marie, her daughter and son-in-law, the Archduke and Archduchess Anton [formerly Princess Ileana], and their three children embarked for London.

Gendarmes had been guarding the right of way and one asserted he saw a stone thrown from beside the tracks.

Australia Boasts Record Surplus of $17,810,000

CANBERRA, Australia, July 3.—(AP)—A record budget surplus of $17,810,000 for the year 1935-'36 was announced today by R. G. Casy, treasurer of Australia. It was the fifth consecutive surplus for the commonwealth. The showing was attributed mainly to increased customs and excise receipts totaling $17,940,000.

MOSLEM RIOTERS ATTACK JEWS IN FRENCH TUNISIA

Paris Invokes Measures to Halt Conflicts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 3.—While the French government took steps today to halt conflicts in the North African territories under its control, reports of continued fighting in those areas reached Paris.

Jewish merchants in Sousse, Tunisia, barricaded themselves in their stores to beat off attacks by Moslems until troop reinforcements arrived to reëstablish order. A Moslem, a policeman, and a Senegalese sharpshooter were wounded, and Jewish stores were looted.

Gendarme Kills Moslem.

At Gafsa, west central Tunisia, a Moslem was killed by a gendarme when the latter was mobbed as he arrested a Mohammedan for fighting with a Jew. The mob bore down upon him with stones and clubs and he fired in trying to drive them off. The row developed into a city-wide fight and troops took control to reestablish order.

Despite these latest outbreaks, however, Gov. Gen. le Beau of Algeria, who is in Paris to confer with Premier Leon Blum and Roger Salengro, minister of interior, said that "almost all the strikes and conflicts in Algeria are in the course of arbitration. I am distinctly optimistic that the agitation manifested recently will not be slow in calming."

Following Le Beau's conferences with officials, it was said the government had taken "important colonial measures to avoid a recurrence of the incidents in North Africa."

Only one of the measures was disclosed. It was an appeal made to natives by their leaders which said: "We beseech you not to listen to agitators. Have confidence in your distinguished governor general and the government of the Popular Front."

Foes Blame Each Other.

Meanwhile, the controversy still raged in France over who is responsible for the African unrest. The leftists blamed the rightist. The rightists blamed the leftists.

Premier Blum's leftist paper La Populaire said: "We denounce the persons responsible for this tension, first the misery engendered by a barbarous régime which capitalists impose on the natives, and then the campaign of agitation conducted by French Fascists and agents to divert the anger of the masses by arousing hatred of races."

Conservative newspapers said communist agitation, conducted over past years, is now bearing fruit.

The government also had another serious situation to deal with—the strife between farmers and farm hands in the Leon vineyard district. Police had to stop fighting there today. One person was injured.

Fix Wheat Control Board.

The chamber of deputies began consideration of farm legislation. The leftist majority, over the objection of Radical Socialists who demanded more time for study, passed the wheat bill, providing for a wheat control board. Rightists claim this measure will involve "ruinous" expenditure, but Georges Bonnet, minister of agriculture, said this measure and others must be taken at once to help farmers. He said Czechoslovakia has a similar wheat control.

"The government will take measures to solve the grave problems which farm workers demand at present," he said.

The strike situation showed a few new developments, including minor walkouts of truck drivers at the Lyons stockyard, the strike of 200 employed in the Lanvin Atelier dress establishment [where 200 seamstresses have just gone back to work] and the folded arms strike of textile laborers at Lille and of Strasbourg miners.

NANKING MOVES TO END CONFLICT WITH CANTONESE

HONGKONG, July 3.—(AP)—Reports from Nanking indicated today a formula for the peaceful settlement of differences between Nanking and Canton military leaders had been found.

Advices from Changsha, capital of Hunan province, said Nanking [central] government troops halted at Kiyang and Leiyang in Hunan while those at Chenchow, Honan province, were ordered to retire 50 miles.

Chinese troops took the field when Canton [South China] leaders began an anti-Japanese drive and marched soldiers north. Later, various quarters denied an attack on the Japanese was the goal of the movement. Chinese civil war was feared. Troops from the southern province of Kwangsi encamped in South Hunan province, facing a Nanking concentration. Fighting was reported and denied, and Canton spokesmen insisted all southwest troops were withdrawn from Hunan.

RESCUE RUSSIAN PATROL CUT OFF 6 MONTHS BY SNOW

MOSCOW, July 3.—(AP)—A lost border patrol, cut off in the Tannu mountains for six months, was rescued today with the two prisoners it had guarded faithfully during the long isolation.

The patrol, made up of Lieut. Boris Ivanov and two soldiers, and the prisoners kept alive by hunting. The five men lived together in bark huts. The prisoners had been arrested as trespassers from Outer Mongolia.

When the party had started back to a frontier base, blizzards swept down through a mountain passage, blocking the way. The men had only one month's food supply.

15 NEW GENERALS TO BE NAMED IN ARMY BY 1937

Assistant Chief of Engineers First.

Washington, D. C., July 3.—(AP)—The appointment of fifteen new generals before next January—changing considerably the face of the army's upper crust—tonight lay ahead of President Roosevelt and his military advisers.

Some of the holes to be filled have not yet appeared, but will in coming months because of retirements for age among high ranking officers, among other reasons.

The officers—four major generals and eleven brigadier generals—will be selected from among the senior eligible officers of their grade on recommendation by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staf, and hold their rank pending confirmation by congress.

Engineer to Be First.

The first appointment to be made, war department officials said today, would be the designation of a brigadier general to act as assistant chief of engineers.

Recognizing the sharp increase in engineer corps activities as a result of the nationwide construction program now in progress, congress provided for another assistant to Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, chief of engineers.

Gen. Markham, now on an inspection trip, is expected back in the near future and the new appointment is slated to be made soon thereafter from among the senior colonels in the engineer corps.

Parker Soon to Retire.

The four major generals to retire soon are Frank Parker, commanding the Eighth corps area at San Antonio; Frank C. Bolles, commanding the Seventh corps area at Omaha; Lytle Brown, now en route from Panama; and Charles E. Kilbourne, commanding the Sixth corps area at Chicago.

Their successors as commanding generals of those important corps areas will be selected from among the senior major generals now assigned to less important posts.

New brigadier generals, to come from the eligible list of colonels, will be selected to succeed the four brigadiers who will be moved up to major generals, and six brigadiers who will retire before the year's end.

Retiring Brigadiers.

The retiring brigadiers are: Hamilton Hawkins, commanding the First cavalry division at Fort Bliss, Tex.; Casper H. Conrad Jr., commanding the Third division at Fort Lewis, Wash.; James B. Gowen, Schofield barracks, Hawaii; Charles S. Lincoln, recently relieved as assistant chief of staf: Ernest D. Scott, Fort Hoyle, Md., and Arthur S. Conklin, Boston coast artillery district.

BRITISH ARE TOLD COST OF ARMING WILL COME HIGH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 3.—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, told British taxpayers today to prepare themselves "to face exceptional, abnormal, and even phenomenal rates of expenditure in order to finance the government's arms increase program." The total expenditure was estimated at 3 billion dollars.

Chamberlain told the house of commons that the $77,000,000 imposed in extra taxation this year covered only a small fraction of what actually has been spent so far on arms. Supplementary estimates will be submitted later in the year for more funds.

He said he was confident the country's wealth will be able to support this "gigantic multiplication of budget expenditure" in order to carry out the defense program "with a constantly rising standard of life and health." A budget deficit is certain and it is only a problem of how big it will be, Chamberlain said.

It was disclosed that Great Britain during the first quarter of the fiscal year spent 72,000,000 pounds [$360,000,000] more than its revenue. The reasons were the additional military expenditure and a slight decline in income tax returns. At this rate the budget deficit for the year would be about 1 billion 500 million dollars.

HITLER SETS 3 GOALS FOR GERMANY: HONOR, PEACE AND FREEDOM

WEIMAR, Germany, July 3.—"Providence enabled us to preserve peace for our nation besides granting us success in our work. We have only one wish for the future that we may be able to preserve peace, but always the word peace must be preceded by the word honor and followed by the word freedom. This is our nation and the world must fully realize it."

Reichsfuehrer Hitler made this declaration today in a speech at the ducal castle of Goethe's town, Weimar. He addressed Nazi party members in commemoration of the first party caucus held in Weimar ten years ago after the rebirth of the Nazi party when Hitler was released from prison for starting the ill-fated putsch of 1923. A crowd of 300,000 heard the address which included a warning.

"May you never forget that the strength of the nation cannot be gauged when luck is with it, but when apparent failure threatens," he said. "In our ten year struggle truly strong men stood by us when things were hardest. It is when luck seems to turn from us that hard men and true fidelity can be discovered. These men were found.

"I pray that in the future, when life will have gone from me, the German people will remember these virtues of strength and fidelity. Our past struggle is only the beginning of many eccentrics of the campaign for our nation and the future."

COURT UPHOLDS U. S. BAN ON SALE OF 'DRAW' CANDY

A federal trade commission order restraining four Chicago confection manufacturers from using the "break and take" or "draw" method of sales promotion as a lottery was upheld yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here.

The decision was written by Judge Will M. Sparks, with the concurrence of Judges Evan A. Evans and Walter C. Lindley. The case was an appeal from the trade commission's order by A. McLean & Son, M. J. Holloway & Co., the Queen Anne Candy company, and the Bonita company.

The trade commission held the system by which the purchaser obtained a free piece of candy when the first piece purchased was of a certain color "was morally bad and encouraged gambling among school children."

Attorneys for the companies contended the order was invalid, comparing it to the celebrated Schechter case upon which the NRA was invalidated. The Court of Appeals, however, held that the order dealt only with goods in interstate commerce, and is legal.

FIND EX-SEAMAN SOLD NAVY DATA TO A JAP AGENT

Faces Twenty Years in U. S. Prison.

Los Angeles, July 3.—(AP)—A former navy yeoman, Harry Thomas Thompson, was speedily convicted today of selling United States fleet information to a Japanese secret agent—a case believed unprecedented in navy and war department history.

After he had admitted boarding battleships and supplying "clippings" for a Japanese who paid him "about $700" in salaries, Thompson was found guilty of conspiracy to commit espionage by a federal jury which was out only ten minutes.

Thompson, whose trial began only yesterday, will be brought to court Monday to be sentenced. A maximum term of twenty years is possible.

Indicted with Japanese.

He was indicted ten days ago with a man identified as Toshio Miyazaki, a lieutenant commander of the imperial Japanese navy. The Japanese government has confirmed that a man of that name is a member of its naval college but pointed out that the name is a common one in that country.

The verdict was reached on the first ballot after five minutes of discussion.

United States Judge Leon Yankwich said that, in his opinion, this was the first espionage case ever tried during peace times. Thompson heard the verdict without change of expression.

Only Witness for Self.

He was his only witness and the court told the jury "your quick verdict indicates that you consider his defense preposterous."

Thompson's defense was that he acted merely as a "clipping bureau" for Miyazaki, who was enrolled at Stanford university during 1934 and 1935 as an observer.

Thompson talked freely of his association with Miyazaki and of boarding United States battleships but denied he stole valuable secret papers on board.

TWO HUNGARIANS IN PISTOL DUEL; MISS; END FEUD

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 3.—(AP)—Two Hungarian parliament members stepped off thirty paces in a pistol duel and emerged tonight unscathed, friends.

One of them, Count George Apponyi, Liberal, and son of Hungary's grand old man, the late Count Albert, had accused Victor Karolyi, Conservative member, of Nazi sympathies. Karolyi retaliated by saying Count Apponyi was a Liberal party servant for selfish reasons. The bloodless duel resulted.

Gen. Stephen Horthy, brother of the regent, Admiral Nicholas von Horthy, was among the distinguished seconds for the duel.

HAMILTON FINDS SURGE TO G. O. P. A LANDSLIDE SIGN

Notes Spread of Revolt Against Roosevelt.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, said yesterday the surge to the G. O. P. is growing so rapidly that he is of the belief that "President Roosevelt in November is going to take the same kind of licking Smith did in 1928 and Hoover did in 1932."

He quoted Charles G. Dawes, former vice president, as saying that the spirit manifested at the Republican dinner at the Palmer house Thursday night was "the nearest approach to that of the McKinley campaign of 1896 we've ever seen." Gen. Dawes was an Illinois leader in the McKinley movement that year and later was controler of the currency.

All Meetings Enthusiastic.

"I don't remember the McKinley campaign as I was only a small boy," said Chairman Hamilton, "but I do know that in the years I have been in politics I have never seen more enthusiastic and spirited meetings. "The one I recently addressed in New Jersey on a farm ten miles north of Trenton was attended by 3,500 party workers, all on their tiptoes; the one a few nights ago at Columbus, O., was just as enthusiastic and I was told by forecasters with a reputation for hitting things right that Ohio would go for Landon and Knox by at least 150,000.

"Last night's dinner at the Palmer house, they told me was the greatest political banquet ever held in Chicago, and it showed how sentiment is spreading like a prairie fire.

Revolt Against Roosevelt.

"The spread of the popular revolt against Roosevelt from the east westward, I believe, is attributable to the New Deal policies as they affect industry and agriculture. New England was against the New Deal a year and a half ago, probably due to the collapse of the textile industry, the failure to protect it against foreign trade, and the manipulation of the NRA in favor of southern textiles. These policies woke New England early.

"The reciprocal trade agreements roused the west and the midwest and all agricultural states. The last tax bill is hitting the small man. The people are beginning to pay the cost of the New Deal and are awakening to what the tax bills will be later on.

Spreads from Coast to Coast.

"As this feeling becomes more and more acute, it spreads from coast to coast with increasing intensity. We have just received reports indicating we have prospects of carrying the state of Washington, where sentiment has rapidly changed in the last two months."

Chairman Hamilton announced he will attend the Wisconsin Republican state convention in Milwaukee next Wednesday. He is to make an address. The subjects on which he will talk have not yet been made public, but conjecture yesterday was that he might dwell on the tarif, on reciprocal trade agreements and the imports of foreign goods competing in the home market against farmers in Wisconsin, the leading dairying state.

Again with Borah on Tarif.

Mr. Hamilton agrees with Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, who said in Chicago a few days ago that the reciprocal trade agreements and the invasion of the home market of the American farmer by foreign farm products will be a real factor in the campaign. "It is going to be the vital issue in all agricultural states from coast to coast," said Hamilton.

Asked whether he expected to talk with Borah, Hamilton replied: "I expect to see Senator Borah when I go into Idaho some time in August."

In another Parthian shot at the doings at the Philadelphia Democratic convention, concerning the patron saints of that party, Hamilton remarked:

"The Democrats got back to Jefferson by abolishing the two-thirds rule but at the same time they rolled Andrew Jackson who put it in more than a hundred years ago."

Application for a permit to fly the 1936 Republican flag, a G. O. P. elephant on a sunflower background, from the windows of new national headquarters in the Railway Exchange building, was made yesterday to the Chicago park board. Meanwhile the flags were taken in.

COUGHLIN SEES LEMKE WINNER IN HOUSE VOTE

Buffalo, N. Y., July 3.—(AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, founder of the National Union for Social Justice, said here today the new Union party candidate, Representative William Lemke, would be elected President because "we will have a majority in the house of representatives and the election will be thrown into the house.

Father Coughlin, who has thrown his support behind the third party, said neither President Roosevelt nor Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, the Republican candidate, would receive a majority in November. "I think the vote will be thrown into the house of representatives and we'll have enough votes there to elect Lemke," he said. "We're sure of 175 congressmen right now, without raising another finger, and by November we hope to have a majority."

Father Coughlin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Coughlin of Royal Oak, Mich., accompanied him. He said he was going to Boston.

Lemke's Name Filed for November Canvass in Iowa

Des Moines, Ia., July 3.—(AP)—L. M. Peet, union party chairman for Iowa, today filed with the Iowa secretary of state the party's nomination papers naming Representative William Lemke and Thomas O'Brien presidential and vice presidential candidates. Peet said it was the party's first filing in preparation for the November general election.

LANDON LEAVES COLORADO PARK FOR HOME TODAY

Passes Final Day with Political Advisers.

BY WILLIAM O'NEIL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Estes Park, Colo., July 3.—[Special.]—Gov. Alf M. Landon spent the last day of his Colorado vacation conferring with his personal advisers and leading members of the Republican party. The governor will leave here at noon tomorrow for Topeka and the special session of the Kansas legislature.

W. B. Bell, national finance chairman of the Republican party, arrived today and immediately went to the ranch for a luncheon table discussion with Landon.

Former United States Senator Lawrence C. Phipps of Colorado, who is a national committeeman from this state; Charles Enos, the Colorado state chairman of the party, and other prominent Colorado Republicans also attended the luncheon.

Support Is Pledged.

None of those present at the luncheon would reveal the nature of the conversation held there, other than to say that the Coloradoans had assured Landon of their support and that he will carry the state in November.

The governor said he had not discussed the question of campaign finances with Bell, but it was understood that they will talk over the campaign later.

"This was my first meeting with Bell," Landon said. "Our talk was the usual political talk that goes on around every corner grocery store stove."

Mrs. Landon and the three Landon children will remain at the ranch when the governor leaves tomorrow.

Wife to Attend Ceremonies.

The governor's wife will go east to Topeka for the notification ceremonies on July 23, after which she and Landon are expected to return here for another three weeks of rest before the campaign swings into its full stride.

On the way to Denver tomorrow Gov. Landon will stop off at Greeley, Colo., to make a short address before a rodeo crowd there. He then will proceed to an unannounced destination near Topeka for a Sunday with friends.

Landon will meet several of the legislative committees Monday morning and will give his message to the legislature in person the next day.

LANDONCAMPAIGN REVIVES SOCIETY OF KANSANS HERE

Former residents of Kansas have revived the Kansas Society of Chicago, with John P. Landreth as its president. Formerly there was a Kansas organization of this sort which was successful for years, but during the depression it slowed up. With Gov. Alf M. Landon as Republican presidential nominee and the sunflower in growing evidence as a party emblem in 1936, it was deemed an opportune time to revive the society.

Woman Held Without Bond in Death of Invalid Mother

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 3.—(AP)—Sadie Lawson, 35, tobacco factory employé, charged with causing the death of her invalid mother by setting fire to her bed, was held without bond on a murder charge today.

BORAH IS HOME BUT HOLDS TONGUE UPON HIS FUTURE PLANS

Pocatello, Idaho, July 3.—(AP)—Idaho gave an enthusiastic welcome today to Senator William E. Borah, but the veteran statesman dropped no clear hint as to his future political plans.

His only direct comment on the national political scene was:

"The platforms of both major parties do not present any profound differences and the monopoly planks in each are about the same."

NEBRASKA GAINS MILLION CASH IN LAST YEAR

Tax Payments Rise in Debtless State.

Lincoln, Neb., July 3.—(AP)—Debtless Nebraska cast up its annual accounts today and credited improved farm tax payments with boosting its treasury balance by more than a million dollars.

Deputy State Treasurer H. J. Murray said the balance July 1 in all state cash and investment funds was $20,728,557. A year ago it was $19,720,065. An additional $893,373 in federal aid highway and social security funds also was in the treasury.

Murray said an improvement in tax payments by farmers helped the state increase its balance. He said the state has $13,747,005 invested in bonds for permanent school and soldiers' aid funds.

Gain Over a Million.

The cash balance of $6,981,551 was $1,123,069 more than a year ago. He reported a decrease from $1,403,283 last year to $630,724 this year in the state's general fund, but said this was due to the payment of emergency appropriations by the 1935 legislature, for which 1935 taxes are just beginning to arrive.

State Tax Commissioner W. H. Smith said he believed Nebraska's showing would be even better except that many taxpayers withheld payments pending a Nebraska Supreme court decision on the validity of a 1935 act offering cancelation of interest and penalties on delinquent taxes if paid at once or under an instalment plan.

Require Pay-As-You-Go.

Nebraska's constitution and laws require the state to stay on a pay-as-you-go basis. The constitution forbids debt in excess of $100,000 and statutes require a tax levying board to meet after biennial legislative sessions and fix the tax rate mathematically by dividing the appropriations into the assessed property values. The state has neither an income nor a sales tax.

After the world war the state built a $10,000,000 capitol by levying a small annual property tax and building each year a section which could be paid for by proceeds of the tax. The state highway system has been financed by a gasoline tax, without bonds.

SERRITELLA VOTE IS CUT BY 216 AS RECOUNT GOES ON

Opponent Also Loses 51 Ballots.

With 37 precinct ballot boxes still to be opened, State Senator Daniel A. Serritella yesterday had a net loss of 216 in the recount of votes cast on April 14 for delegates to the Republican national convention from the First congressional district.

Charges made by Horace M. Sharpe, former assistant state's attorney, one of the four candidates in the delegate race, that Serritella's 181 vote victory over him had been made possible by the casting of 500 fraudulent votes, resulted Thursday in an order by County Judge Jarecki that all votes be recounted. Even though the convention is now a matter of history, Judge Jarecki announced the recount will proceed "so that the guilty, if any, may be punished."

Boxes from 113 of the 150 precincts in the district had been opened and the ballots recounted by last evening. The remaining boxes will be opened Monday.

In the recount thus far, of precincts in the 1st, 2d, 4th, and 11th wards, Serritella gained 39 and lost 255 votes, a net loss of 216. Sharpe gained 60 and lost 111, a net loss of 51.

These figures do not indicate the results so far, however, for 227 uncounted ballots have been placed "in exhibit"; which means they will be examined by Judge Jarecki to determine whether they will be counted for either candidate. Most of these ballots were initialed by two sets of election judges and clerks.

In addition, the exhibits include 700 ballots which have been counted but which were protested either by John F. Tyrrell, Sharpe's attorney, or Attorney E. M. Libonati, representing Serritella.

YOUTH CONGRESS HEAD DEMANDS 5 MILLION JOBS

Cleveland, O., July 3.—(AP)—William W. Hinckley, national chairman of the American youth congress demanded tonight that the government provide jobs for the idle young men and women of the country, whose number he estimated at from 5 to 8 millions.

"If the country doesn't face this most important problem as it should," Hinckley said, "we may see our youth listening to the first skillful demagog to appeal to them and be swept into a Fascist youth movement dedicated to violence."

Hinckley spoke as hundreds of young men and women prepared for a meeting at Public hall in which delegates to the congress will express their convictions concerning unemployment, relief, and social problems of youth.

The congress, Hinckley said, supports the American youth act, which asks jobs for young people at union wages on government projects.

MRS. DILL TELLS HOW LOVE CAME IN THEIR LIVES

Spokane, Wis., July 3.—(AP)—How love came to a bachelor United States senator and a suffragist leader in the nation's capital was related on the witness stand today in the divorce battle of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dill.

Mrs. Dill, the former Rosalie Jones, wealthy suffragist "general," told the story in resisting the former senator's suit.

"We were natural people," she said. "He had lived the life of a bachelor, I the life of an unmarried woman. We weren't children any more. We put away foolish things. We loved each other, we admired each other. "And so we were married."

They met, Mrs. Dill testified, after the then senator from Washington state spoke on the senate floor on Muscle Shoals. She testified she sent him a note and a caricature she had drawn of him as she listened.

N. Y. CATHOLIC PAPER ASSAILS ROOSEVELT FOR 'CLASS STRUGGLE'

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—An attack on President Roosevelt and the Democratic platform is made by The Brooklyn Tablet, weekly newspaper published by the Roman Catholic diocese of Brooklyn, in its issue of tomorrow.

The editorial, written by Patrick F. Scanlan, managing editor, condemns what he calls the Roosevelt philosophy of edification of the state un-American and characterizes "planned economy" as a fraud. It asks why, if this philosophy of government had been successful, although millions are still out of work and billions of dollars gone, must the class struggle and class hatred be preached.

"Why must sanguinary battles be predicted in the 'war for political and economic freedom?' the editorial continues, with reference to President Roosevelt's acceptance speech. Why must we be 'enlisted for the duration of the war?' Who are these enemies who are to be fought? Where is the enlisted enemy within our gates?"

"SHOW IS OVER," SAYS ZIONCHECK, BACK IN SEATTLE

Blames Farley, Others for Detention.

Seattle, Wash., July 3.—[Special.]—Declaring that "the show's over," but finding few who believed him, Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, Washington's bad boy legislator, returned home to his family and constituents today after his frolics in the national capital.

"O, I may have a 'Zioncheck zipper' or two," the madcap young man amended, "but I'm not overdoing it."

Explaining that he was "glad to get back where I can get a smell of the rain," Zioncheck said he wasn't going to do anything for several days.

He still was resentful over his incarceration in a Maryland mental hospital. He blamed Postmaster General James A. Farley and "others high in President Roosevelt's estimate."

"They wanted to keep me out of the newspapers and out of congress just before and during the national Democratic convention," he said.

In a copyrighted story, the Post-Intelligencer today said Zioncheck declared he may run for governor of Washington this fall because he would have charge of all the asylums for insane in the state.

"I have been considering that recently," the congressman was quoted as having said. "Now, since my experiences include insane asylums, it looks more attractive to me than ever. If I were governor I would have charge of all the insane asylums in the state and I would get rid of a lot of these so-called insanity experts."

MOVE TO CANCEL CITIZENSHIP OF 101 IN NEW YORK

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Proceedings to cancel the citizenship of 101 naturalized persons were instituted today in federal court. Judge William Bondy, on motion by the United States attorney, issued summonses and complaints for service on the former aliens, most of whom have returned to their native countries. The number of suits is far in excess of any previous day's record.

The proceedings in most cases are purely routine and will go by default. Only ten of those named for rejection are in this country, the rest having left it and taken up residence permanently abroad.

HANGS SELF IN BASEMENT.

Thomas Ryda, 61 years old, 2227 North Lorel avenue, hanged himself in the basement of his home yesterday. His son, Benjamin, informed police his father had been ill for four years.

SEES HOPELESS FUTURE ON FARM IN DROUTH AREA

North Dakotan Loses Crop for 5th Year.

Speaks has not harvested a crop in five years. Withering drouth has destroyed every crop prospect since he moved to his location six miles southeast of here in 1930.

"When a fellow can't raise enough from mother earth to feed his family, then it's time he moved—and that's exactly what I intend to do," he said.

Four Children to Feed.

"It takes a lot to feed four hungry children and when a man works in the field he needs hearty meals."

Wood cutting on the still-green banks of the Missouri river is going to be this farmer's next vocation, just two miles from where he now lives.

"I've got a good ax and a strong arm," Speaks said. "Before fall I intend to build a log cabin for the family. I am certain the wood market will be sufficient to keep us from starving this winter."

Will Put in Garden.

He intends to put in a garden down there where vegetables will be protected from the unending sweep of hot winds. As soon as he can afford it, Speaks will use a six horse gasoline engine to pump water from the river on to a small irrigation project.

Farmer Speaks believes irrigation is the only possible move for the federal government to relieve western North Dakota of successive crop failures.

He declared that a good farmer could "make it pay" if he moved off his parched quarter section and took up 60 acres under irrigation on the Missouri.

N. Y. WANTS U. S. TO PUT HARBOR AT FAIR GATES

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—A harbor for trans-Atlantic liners at the doorstep of the World's Fair site in the Flushing Meadows, Queens, is being planned by the Fair corporation, it was announced today.

The $3,000,000 improvement of Flushing bay is said to have the full approval of President Roosevelt. At a recent conference in Washington with Grover A. Whalen, president of the World's Fair corporation, the President pledged his support in obtaining war department coöperation and the necessary authorization of congress, it was said.

Plans of fair engineers call for dredging a thirty foot channel from deep water in the East river to the mouth of the Flushing river, a distance of two and one-half miles. Additional dredging would be done to provide an anchorage or turning field one mile square at the lower end of the channel adjacent to the fair site.

Have $80,000 Commission on Roosevelt at 8 to 5

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Baldwin & Co., Wall street betting commissioners, announced today that it had $80,000 ready to bet on President Roosevelt against Gov. Landon at odds of 8 to 5. The betting commissioners' principal was a syndicate of Wall street traders, according to the announcement. No Landon money has appeared at odds of 8 to 5 since Gov. Lehman reconsidered his decision not to run again.

Upton Sinclair Out of Politics for All Time

Pasadena, Cal., July 3.—(AP)—A "complete and final" retirement from politics was announced today by Upton Sinclair, who as Democratic nominee for governor of California in 1934 sponsored a "production for use" program.

Further and Heavier Rains Forecast in Drouth Areas

Bismarck, N. D., July 3.—[Special.]—Hopes for some substantial relief from the drouth were revived tonight as further and more widely scattered showers were predicted and the interstate commerce commission authorized sharply reduced rates for the transportation of forages to the stricken west.

Pending the arrival of the long awaited water, Bismarck baked in temperatures that ranged up to 96 degrees, while in neighboring South Dakota, Pierre and Mobridge sweltered in 104 degree heat.

Rain Misses North Dakota.

North Dakota and some other extremely arid regions were missed by the rains that bathed withering fields in the south, portions of the east, and some of the farm belt.

The authorization of reduced freight rates, which will be effective until Dec. 31, was made in Washington to facilitate the transportation of hay and other forages from Colorado and Nebraska to points in Montana and Wyoming.

Asserting that immediate measures of relief are necessary in these sections of Montana and Wyoming to avoid loss of live stock and prevent general suffering, the commission authorized carriers to reduce the rates on hay, pigeon grass, and wild grasses by 33 1-3 per cent.

It was announced at Pierre, S. D., by WPA and relief heads that a start already had been made in putting to work an estimated 100,000 needy farmers in the drouth belt of Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Nebraska. The first group of 1,000 men were assigned to dam and road construction on a basic pay of 35 cents an hour.

The Drouth in 3 States.

Federal meteorologists today outlined the drouth situation in three states as follows:

Iowa—Corn in most of the state is still not seriously damaged, but oats, barley and small grains in the south and west are suffering through a combination of heat and grasshoppers. A break in the intense heat is more needed than general rains. Showers were predicted for northeast Iowa tonight.

Nebraska—Oats and late wheat are being severely damaged in most of Nebraska. Early wheat, which suffered to a small extent, is being harvested in some areas. Nearly all of Nebraska is badly in need of soaking rains. Grasshoppers have caused total loss of crops in many sections. Temperatures ran as high as 111 today.

Kansas—Corn in the state is not seriously injured yet, and was benefited Tuesday by a good rain which carried over into Missouri. Much of the state's small grain has been lost through drouth and grasshoppers.

25 Dead in Flood.

Cuero, Tex., July 3.—[Special.]—Property losses mounted to over 3½ million dollars today while the list of known dead went to 25 in the south Texas floods. Three were still missing. New crop and live stock damages were caused as the Guadalupe river overflowed the coastal plains toward Victoria.

Warnings were dropped from planes in nearly every remote settlement in the danger area along the river. The flood swollen Colorado river also left its banks at Wharton today and began moving over lowlands. Heavy rains in the water shed had fed the stream.

INDIANA MAYOR AGAIN IS FACING TERM IN JAIL

Huntington, Ind., July 3.—(AP)—Mayor C. W. H. Bangs and other city officials and employés escaped going to jail at least until 3 o'clock Monday afternoon when Judge Huber M. Devoss today gave them until that time to disconnect private consumers served by the Huntington municipal electric plant.

Judge Devoss held them guilty today of violating a permanent injunction, issued a year ago, forbidding an extension of municipal lines in competition with those of the privately owned Northern Indiana Power company.

Since taking office in 1933 the mayor has been attempting to establish the municipal plant as a competitor to the privately owned utility.

SISTER SEEKS TO WIN LIBERTY FOR MRS. TEGTMEYER

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus to free Mrs. Daisy C. Tegtmeyer, 50 years old, from the county jail where she has been a prisoner for two and a half years for contempt of court, was filed in Circuit court yesterday.

Mrs. Tegtmeyer was sentenced on Jan. 5, 1934, by Judge Hugo M. Friend until she should account for $30,000 she allegedly abstracted as trustee from the estate of Henry Tegtmeyer, father of her husband, Edward, both of whom are dead. The money was being held in trust for her missing brother-in-law, Frank.

The habeas corpus petition was filed in behalf of Mrs. Tegtmeyer's sister, Mrs. Myrtle Moore, a Brooklyn, N. Y., school teacher.

Country Clubs to Provide Fun for All Today

Arrange Special Programs for Children.

BY JUDITH CASS.

IN SPITE of all the efforts to make this a safe and sane Fourth, residents of Chicago and the suburbs undoubtedly will be awakened at an early hour this morning by neighbors' children . . . or their own . . . firing firecrackers. After arguments and worry all morning it will be a blessing for parents to take their children to some country club or park where they can see a fireworks display large and exciting enough to satisfy any one, but not put on at any risk to the children.

The Onwentsia, the Glen View, the Chicago Golf, the Exmoor, the Skokie, and the Evanston Golf clubs have planned entertainment for children today, but the Winter club, Lake Forest's children's club, will be closed for the day. In the morning and afternoon at the Onwentsia the golf course will be reserved for men who will compete in three tournaments, including one for the John H. Hamline Memorial cup. Robert A. Gardner is club champion.

Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock for members and their children, and there will be dancing for the adults all evening and a Punch and Judy show and a fireworks display for the youngsters. Through the rest of the summer there will be dining and dancing every Saturday night as well as on Thursday nights.

Glen View to Have Program for Children.

In addition to men's golfing events all day at the Glen View, there will be a swimming meet for children this afternoon. Newton Tobey is in charge of the events for children, and he and Lucius A. Crowell, swimming chairman, have arranged an exciting afternoon including a flag raising parade. There will be a dinner-dance tonight and a buffet supper tomorrow night. Among those entertaining this evening are the Frank R. Elliotts, the Robert D. Wearys, J. W. Embree Jr., Robert M. Cain and the Norman B. Johnsons.

The Chicago Golf gave its holiday dance last night and plans to serve dinner tonight to members and their children, with a large fireworks display as soon as darkness falls. During the day there will be golfing events for men with the President's trophy for the main prize—Gorton Fauntleroy is president—and a ladies' putting contest in the afternoon. A buffet luncheon will be served today and tomorrow.

The Exmoor Country club is one of the most popular spots for children on the Fourth, for all sorts of entertainment is provided, including magicians, sleight-of-hand artists, clowns, and ponies to ride. After a buffet supper the children and their parents will enjoy the most complicated of fireworks displays from the vantage point of the clubhouse and porches which overlook the golf course. The Exmoor held its weekly dance last night. Play for the Charles W. Fullerton cup, presented to the club in 1899, will provide the main golfing event for men today. Carl Ingram is club champion.

Program at Skokie to Include Races.

After 4 o'clock this afternoon No. 1 fairway at the Skokie club will be closed for children's sports. Pirie Carson is in charge of a number of races, some of them obstacle races, with plenty of lollipops, ice cream, and prizes for every one. There will be the usual golfing events for men. Skokie's next dance will be held next Saturday.

The Evanston Golf club always devotes the Fourth to men and children, with golfing events for the former and a children's party in the afternoon.

Members of the Indian Hill club will play for the Thomas H. McInerney trophy today while the women enjoy a buffet luncheon and bridge on the club's cool inclosed porches. There will be a dinner-dance tonight and a buffet supper tomorrow night. Those who weary of watching the golfers may stroll to the tennis courts where the club's annual tournament for boys and girls and men and women will be held. Albert Winston is the club tennis champion, and his sister, Miss Virginia Winston, is one of the better women players. Among those who have the best chance still to be competing next week-end when the tournament ends are Miss Helen Fulton, club champion; Miss Evelyn Bouscaren, Miss Adelaide Ball, Miss Mary Lyons, Mrs. Ripley Baker, Ned Brown, Donald Brown, Francis R. Stanton and George Doty Jr.

Among those entertaining at the dinner-dance tonight are the Robert F. Lairds, the Godfrey H. Atkins, the Daniel Leonards and the Dwight C. Greens.

The chief event in the men's golfing tournaments today at the Knollwood club is the Service Men's tournament in which members will play for a cup donated by N. W. MacChesney. W. Hart Johnston is golf champion. There will be a dinner-dance at the club tonight.

Members will play for the Governor's cup at the Shoreacres club today for the first time, as it is a new trophy. It must be won three times before a member may take it home. There will be a men's golfing tournament at the Barrington Hills Country club all day with an approaching and putting tournament for women in the morning followed by luncheon and tennis or swimming. Mrs. Samuel D. Rowe, Mrs. Robert W. Buckley and Miss Billie White are among

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

There's a new boon for the woman who strives for summer daintiness—an "ice" that vanishes when applied and that checks perspiration in a few moments.

The new deodorant "ice" that recently came to town is a grand preparation to keep at hand—in the desk drawer, the pocket of the car or tucked in with your sports gear. It checks perspiration efficiently and you can apply it as quick as a wink.

This is a nonperspirant, not just a neutralizer of the odor of perspiration. It's like a greaseless cream; when it is patted into the skin, either with the fingers or a pad of cotton, it disappears almost instantly, leaving no traces of grease which might stain your clothing. The length of its effectiveness varies with the individual, but on the average it insures perfect daintiness for two or three days.

It's a cooling preparation too; feels icy cool against the skin and, once it's applied to the flesh, has no odor of its own. In the jar the "ice" has rather a pungent but clean fragrance; this disappears.

Every woman knows what happens to her light colored silk dresses when she perspires across the shoulders in hot weather. This "ice" will put an end to that little problem. It can be patted into the skin across the back, just below the tops of the shoulders, as easily as it can be patted on the underarm. You can do it yourself with the minimum of stretching or wiggling. You'll find that this is a terribly neat trick of grooming.

So far as exhaustive tests have shown, this "ice" isn't irritating to the most sensitive skin, but we advise women who're thin skinned and who know by experience that they must be a little careful not to use it immediately after shaving. Some women will be able to without the least bit of difficulty.

Colors Used in Makeup Are Important to Facial Contour

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Now you are to be taught to adopt certain of your dress-illusion tricks for your makeup art.

There are certain dress color tricks, for instance, that are employed to accentuate silhouette beauty and certain tricks to hide defects such as large hips, broad waistline, etc. And, as you well understand, it isn't the fabric that is relied on, but the color of the material.

The large woman knows, by one look in a mirror, the difference created when she wears a dark color as opposed to her apparent girth in a light color. The stocking shade worn affects the apparent size of the leg. There's simply a world of subterfuge in color.

Women do not think of this enough in connection with makeup colors. But it is the underlying principle of the new school of making up. Certain colors applied to the face in certain ways seemingly will alter its shape and size. For one example there's the woman with a full face. Let her try first a light powder and then a darker one. There will be an obviously different effect. Or, take the opposite type of face, a slight, lean one. The darker powder is not half as flattering to this facial contour as a lighter shade would be. Or, take a woman with a heavy chinline. If she uses a light powder along this area, she emphasizes the heaviness. A darker powder would seem to refine the heavy line.

Some women already have proved to be exceedingly clever at this sort of disguise. I know one whose beauty grief is a nose of fairly large size, which, I might report, she exaggerates as a liability, as women often are inclined to do. However, she has studied makeup in connection with this feature, until she has gained a great deal of personal satisfaction with the use of a rather dark powder which, she feels, makes her nose appear smaller.

I see women on the street or in public conveyances whose undereye fullness I know would appear reduced did they forego the light powder shade for darker ones. There are cases in which the lighter powder would be the subterfuge recommended, as with a shallow-faced one or one with sunken cheeks.

All this calls for study, of course. Practice, too. But since you can get powders for experimental purposes in the dime stores, it need not be a costly training.

When the face is wrinkled, the question of powder color becomes of paramount importance. Ordinarily, I'd say to the older women, don't powder at all. I mean the women in the late fifties and sixties. Unless one at this age, with lined face, is an adept at powder use, catching just the right tint not to show at all, I think she looks better unpowdered. She still can use her clean puffs to remove the shine, if there is any. Usually the skin is dry, however, which is why there are wrinkles.

Good Morning!

You didn't know that vampires could have babies? Well—live and learn, alannas!

Count [Bela Lugosi] Dracula produced one, and she is some baby! A white faced, red lipped, cavernous eyed lady just like her poppa. And, maybe—her momma, too, though her maternal parent is not mentioned in the picture—possibly having collapsed from shock. For to see a little vampire glaring at you from a pillow, after years of living a weird family life with an adult of the species COULD prove a last straw to any even half normal creature.

I had understood that Dad Dracula was dead. But it seems—not dead enough.

An eminent London scientist discovers that Dracula's still leaving his trade-mark on jugular veins. So, in the interests of humanity Prof. Von Helsing seeks out Dracula's coffin and drives a stake through the sleeping bloodsucker's heart—that being the only way to kill a vampire. [Remember that!]

Unashamed, the vampire exterminator confesses what he has done to the head of Scotland Yard—a scoffing gentleman whose sneers shortly change into shudders.

Accused of murder, Von Helsing rings in the services of his friend, that eminent psychiatrist, Jeffrey Garth. . . .

And now, Dracula's daughter appears and steals her poppa's corpse and burns it. . . . Never mind why. . . . She is attended by a horrible servant, gruesomely portrayed by Irving Pichel. After which she goes unhappily about the business of fulfilling old family traditions. "Unhappily" because she doesn't want to be a vampire—but she simply has to do what she does and does and does. . . .

At last she meets what you hope is her end. Alas, though, one can never be sure. The movies being as they are she may reappear at any time.

This is a good little horror film—if chills are what you go in for. The blood-curdling story is enacted by a clever cast, though the ingenue is played by Marguerite Churchill not nearly as well as Marguerite could have played her. Gloria Holden is remarkably effective in the title rôle. Sets and scenery are eerie. [I feel quite sure that the studio dragged out the same old props they've used in other shudder pictures.]

LAST WORDS: LEAVE THE CHILDREN AT HOME.

See you tomorrow.

EVERY week a hairdresser visits the Old People's home in Evanston and washes the hair of the residents. Last week when she made her rounds an 84 year old inmate expressed interest in a permanent wave. After asking questions about it she said she would like to have one, and the hairdresser explained that if she would get a second woman to have one it would be worth her while to bring her machine and equipment to the home. It was thus arranged, and on the morning when the 84 year old inmate was sitting with her hair in curlers, the machine in operation, a bent old lady, leaning on a stick, looked in.

"What are they doing to you?" she inquired in amazement.

"I'm getting a permanent wave," said her friend, and explained the operation.

"And you mean the curls will stay in?" asked the older woman. "Well, I'm going to have one, too. I'm next."

She is 96.

THE incident brought to mind the 90 year old grandmother of a young New Yorker. She was extremely interested in clothes and in her appearance, and one day when he went in to see her he found her at her dressing table trying on a new hat, while several others were scattered about.

"I like that hat, grandmother," he assured her.

"But don't you think it makes me look old?" she inquired.

A 240 foot bed of ghost poppies, among the most gorgeous of all plants, is blooming in the Garfield park flower garden at 3600 West Madison street. Ravinia Breaks Long Silence; Starts Return to Former Glory

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The tree girded pavilion in Ravinia Park, silent since 1931, burst gloriously into sound last night when Ernest Ansermet's sudden, electrifying beat swept the Chicago Symphony orchestra into the lordly first chords of the prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Crowding the open air theater and the benches and lawns just outside were nearly 3,000 people, drawn there to see the opening of the 1936 Ravinia festival.

Sentiment and a respect for the achievements of the past were lures as potent as the desire to hear the familiar Chicago orchestra and a much heralded conductor. From 1919 to 1931 this little stage in the woods knew the tread of the great ones of music, when the Ravinia summer opera drew pilgrims not from the north shore and the Chicago district alone but from all parts of the United States and Canada. A great many people in last night's audience were old habitués of the place, happy in the thought that the first step had at last been taken to restore Ravinia's one time glamor.

Mr. Ansermet and the orchestra rose to the occasion and put on a magnificent show. The program, punctuated in all expected [and some unexpected] places by fervent applause, went from the towering pronouncements and dewy lyricism of "Die Meistersinger" to the smiling Beethoven Seventh symphony. After the intermission came the Berlioz "Carnaval Romaine" overture, two Debussy nocturnes, and the "Fire Bird" suite.

Ernest Ansermet, a tall bearded gentleman with sensitive, nervous hands and an air of great distinction, seeks in his conducting for a burning cleanness of phrase that makes the architecture of the music stand out in the clearest sort of line. He exaggerates neither tempos nor dynamics to any extent, but possesses clever and subtle methods of his own for marking some especially shining idea in the music.

There was a big ovation for Ansermet at the end of the Beethoven. The men of the orchestra joined their applause to that of the audience and refused to rise at the conductor's first invitation.

It is impossible to report yet that a bird flew into the pavilion to double in thirds the theme of the "Prize Song," but this matchless aid to good summer music copy will be arranged for during the present series. There is no word on the mosquitos either. Despite the vast amount of publicity given the Ravinia Festival, those lusty, tri-motored insects of the Skokie did not show up for its opening.

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

The telegrams that Willoughby G. Walling, chairman of the Ravinia Festival association, read during the intermission last night showed, as he said, very plainly with what affection and interest artists and music patrons all over the world regard the reopening of Ravinia park. And he might have added that the size of the audience indicated very clearly with what emotions Chicago music lovers welcome the return of good music to the north shore park.

If every concert during the five weeks of the season is as well attended as the first one, there will be no doubt whatsoever as to Ravinia's future. But the concert-goers should heed Mr. Walling's reminder that "impromptitude is not considerate."

The telegrams extending good wishes to the Ravinia festival were from Dr. Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, who is abroad for the summer; Walter Damrosch, who led the New York Symphony orchestra at the opening concert in Ravinia park years ago; Paul Cravath, president of the Metropolitan Opera association; Mrs. Louis Eckstein, whose generosity is partly responsible for there being a season at Ravinia this year; Lucrezia Bori, the lovely soprano who sang opera at Ravinia for many summers; and Edward Johnson, who also was a favorite with Ravinia opera goers.

It was a lovely night to enjoy music outdoors, with the moon shining gloriously and no mosquitoes—praise be—and the only thing any one could have found to complain about was that it was rather chilly. Those who had thought to bring automobile robes with them were comfortable and snug, but those who wore summer evening gowns and wraps looked, and felt, no doubt, a bit uncomfortable.

Some wise ones were wrapped in furs and looked as if they were at a football game, but they weren't shivering as were their more seasonably clad neighbors. Hot coffee was the favorite refreshment during the intermission.

Some of those in the large audience which overflowed way beyond the unreserved seats were Mrs. Walling, the Thomas H. Fishers, the Howell W. Murrays, the George Voevodskys, the Augustus Knights, Durand Smith, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, the William Wisemans, the Conway Olmsteds, the Scott Bromwells, and the William B. Hales. Others were the Lucius Crowells, Mrs. Kenneth Parker of Janesville, Wis.; the Charles G. Littles, the M. F. Gallaghers and their daughter, Mrs. Charles Butland of China; the Lawrence Sterns, the Willard Boydens, the Richard Bentleys, the Thomas W. Hindes, the Charles Allings and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Brown; the Graham Aldises, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson, the Paul Rowans and her brother, Nathan Swift.

For New Color Sensation Try Smart Yellows

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Nothing like a tryout of a new color . . . take yellow, for instance, the yellows that have been worn by coppertops so long that others think it's a color exclusively for redheads. This summer many have discovered what fun it is to wear it and the result, some of the best looking yellow clothes and costume accessories that have been seen in years.

If you sew your own fashions there's a new yellow shantung linen to use, stunning stuff, a gorgeous shade, actually by count and extensive research just as flattering and becoming to blondes and brunettes as it is effective for redheads. It's a semi-rough texture and will make some very smart midsummer slim one piece dresses or two piece street outfits.

Yellow hats are plentiful, so are gloves and scarfs. Yellow blouses for a sunny contrast for either white or pastel summer suits or dark, thin woolens are sprinkled liberally about the shops. Yellow handbags, in fabrics and patents and lethers are ready for the shoppers who are going out for yellow.

Yellow net dinner or dance dresses for midsummer parties are delectable when they are contrasted with emerald green, with copper brown or with white. Yellow silk suits have been so successful that they are going fast, and the pencil slim one-piece dresses in yellow of silk, cotton, linen, and net are not only the big surprise fashions of the hour but are wearable, thinning and most colorful after weeks of the ordinary pastels and all the well worn white outfits.

If you hesitate to wear dull blacks, refuse to be rushed into black sheers and still want to shine with the summer sun, try the yellow arrivals for charm and something different.

Famed Glamor Girl of Past Is Back in Films

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 3.—[Special.]—"It's a shame that a person can't come back to work without a lot of remarks about her being broke and in need of sympathy," said Rubye De Remer, the movies' big glamor purveyor of fifteen years ago and one time "most beautiful woman in America."

Miss De Remer, who married Benjamin H. Throop, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., millionaire, and withdrew from films after successes with Rex Ingram in Europe as well as in this country, came back to Hollywood, the old scene of her triumphs after years of residence in Europe. She returned to look up old friends and to see how wide the streets had been relaid in the last twelve years. She had become a wealthy widow by Throop's death two years ago.

She met Clarence Brown, who had directed her first film when she was a dashing brunette not long from her home town Denver. It was titled "Don't Marry for Money." Brown asked her if she wanted to go before the camera again.

The result was a subordinate part, that of one of the Washington, D. C., society gossips in Brown's current picture, "The Glorious Hussy," with Joan Crawford and Lionel Barrymore.

"Take my case," said Miss De Remer. "I am working in motion pictures again because I like it and not because of financial necessity. The same is true of many actresses. It gives them pleasure to work and keeps them busy. It is so unfair to have it stated just because a girl is back before the camera after many years away that she is destitute and has to go back to playing extra."

One actress, Betty Blythe, who is well remembered for her exotic starring rôles in silent days, filed a heavy lawsuit against a writer who had alluded to her as an "extra."

Miss Blythe has been playing in a subordinate capacity since sound films came in, but the star of the silent version of "She" never played extra and undoubtedly never will.

Slim Talbot, Gary Cooper's stand-in, has architect's plans for a six room house he is going to erect on the San Fernando valley property that his stand-in's pay earned for him.

Adaline Doyle, Katharine Hepburn's former stand-in [Katy helped Adaline get a better job and Adaline's sister, Patsy, now is Miss Hepburn's stand-in], opened in a New York stage play, "Home, Sweet Home," in its try-out performance at Greenwich this week. On the night of the opening Miss Hepburn had a wire cut through from Hollywood to Greenwich to find out how Adaline went over. More than that, Miss Hepburn telephoned her father, a Hartford physician, and her mother to tell them to run down to Greenwich and "catch" the show. Papa and Mamma Hepburn reported via long distance that they enjoyed the show; that Adaline was "great," and then the, put Adaline on the wire to thank Katy.

Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor have issued statements that they are not going to get married, although they do have "an understanding."

"Our understanding," said Miss Stanwyck, "is one of deep, sincere friendship." The friendship is so deep and so sincere that during the last week Bobbie gave Miss Stanwyck a bracelet and she presented him with a lapel watch.

Ray McCarey, Paramount director, gave a party for his movie friends and when the guests arrived informed them it was to celebrate his twelfth wedding anniversary. The McCareys were married when both were 15. They have two children.

A fan club at Ramseur, N. C., has sent Bing Crosby official notice it succeeded in having a street in that town named for him.

Bob Wilbur, now an extra at United Artists, went overseas with the marines early in 1918. It was shortly after his marriage. He was struck by shrapnel and gassed in the Argonne in October, 1918, and his name appeared on a casualty list as missing in action. His wife in New York married another man, and his mother and sister moved away from the old home on 127th street, New York, while Wilbur was slowly recuperating in army hospitals.

Wilbur came back to the United States [his name used to be Nicholas Russo]. He tried to locate the scattered members of his family with no success since 1930. Recently a cartoonist who sketches movie subjects drew a picture of Wilbur. A letter came from New York. It was from the extra's daughter, a girl now 19 years old, whose existence had been unknown to him. Now the daughter is coming to Hollywood to visit the father she never knew and to get acquainted with Wilbur's second daughter, a girl of 15.

The speed with which film fame flees was illustrated by an attempt by Paramount scouts to locate Betty Compson, starred from 1920 until 1933 in both silent and talking pictures, at her home at Hermosa Beach. Not finding her home, the studio representative went next door. "Does Miss Betty Compson live next door?" he asked the neighbor. "No," was the reply. "I never heard of her."

"Who does live next door?"

"Mr. and Mrs. Irving Weinberg."

In private life Betty Compson is Mrs. Weinberg.

'Stars and Stripes' Quilt Suitable for Growing Boy's Den

Stars and Stripes.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Here is one simple, easy, and patriotically pieced quilt which is the ideal design for the room of any growing or young boy. Red, white, and blue is the only color arrangement with the stars appliqued in white on the blue ground. This is such an easy and quickly pieced block that an extremely young, yet ambitious, needleworker could make a block in twenty minutes. From the single block it is difficult to visualize that the colored portions of the block are arranged in a wavy form to simulate the American flag in the breeze. The white parts of the square merge into the plain blocks so that there appears to be only a series of wavy forms on a white field.

Country Clubs to Provide Fun for All Today

Arrange Special Programs for Children.

those entertaining at luncheon today. The club's July dance will be held on the 27th.

Vanderbilt and Algers Will Be at Arlington.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt of New York, the junior Frederick M. Algers and Mrs. Alger Sr. will be among those from out of town who will spend this afternoon at Arlington Park. The Algers have come from Detroit to see their Azucar race and Mr. Vanderbilt hopes to see his Discovery come in first. The Algers will be luncheon guests of the Laurance H. Armours, and so will the Samuel J. Walkers.

Others who will have luncheon parties at the Post and Paddock club are Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hughes, the junior John R. Thompsons, the Thomas E. Wilsons, the Gustavus F. Swifts, Mrs. Oliver S. Picher, Robert F. Carr, the Silas H. Strawns, the Donald R. McLennans, Harry R. Watt, and Mrs. Harry L. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson Jr. are giving a luncheon tomorrow at home and among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Alger Jr. The A. Thomas Taylors also are entertaining at luncheon in Lake Forest tomorrow. Mr. Taylor's sister, Miss Jane Taylor, and two brothers, Jerome and Richard Taylor, are here from St. Joseph, Mich., for the week-end.

Pleasant Celebration at Harbor Point.

From Harbor Point, Mich., comes news of the way the Chicago colony there will spend the evening of the Fourth. The senior and the junior Joseph E. Otises are giving their annual buffet supper parties and then every one from both parties will get together on the beach to enjoy fireworks. This has been a custom of the Otises for many years and one to which their friends look forward.

The senior Otises' party is being given for Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Rogers, who have taken a cottage on the shore near the Otises' lovely home.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings [Emily Otis] are spending the week-end with her parents, having made the trip north on the Frank H. Woods' yacht. Louis C. Sudler and William Humphries also went to the Point on the yacht. I. Newton Perry has joined his family in the cottage they have at the Point and Andrew Berkey and H. T. Frost are visiting Edward P. Russell over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes have gone to the Point to spend the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes. Mrs. Eugene Swigart and Miss Veronese Beatty are visiting Mrs. Burnet Hersey. Among other cottagers who have guests are the Frank M. Gordons, the Leroy Kramers, the William Wallers, the O'Neil Ryans and the William Smiths and Miss Charlotte Robertson.

Winnetka Group at Green Lake.

A small group of Winnetkans are spending the Fourth at Green Lake, Wis., with Mr. and Mrs. Buckingham Chandler who have a home there. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce MacLeish and their son, Hugh, and the Charles J. Strongs are the Chandlers' guests.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Ott were to have gone to Green Lake this week-end, but as they are sailing on the 16th they decided there was too much to be done at home to get away. The Otts will spend six weeks abroad, but their daughter, Miss Dorothy Ott, who is sailing on the Aquitania with them, will be away for a year. She will stay in Freibourg, Germany. Miss Ott was graduated from Smith college last June.

The junior Edward A. Fargos are others who are spending the holiday in the country. They went by motor to Dixon, Ill., to visit the John G. Ralstons. Every year the Ralstons celebrate the Fourth with a large barbecue dinner and usually a baseball game at their hospitable farm. The Fargos are living at the Onwentsia this summer, having rented their Lake Forest home to Col. and Mrs. Edgar S. Gorrell of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Traylor Swift has joined her mother and brother, Mrs. Melvin A. Traylor and Melvin Jr., at their summer home at the Wausaukee club in Wisconsin. Miss Caryl Bloomingston accompanied Mrs. Swift north to spend the week-end at the Traylors' cabin.

Mrs. Cornelius Crane is in Washington at the Shoreham hotel visiting her parents, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Howell Woodward, before sailing on July 14 on the Normandie for Europe. Mrs. Crane is taking her car with her and will drive to Salzburg for the music festival. In August she will be met there by Mr. Crane, who is now in Tahiti, and together they will stay abroad until the end of January.

John H. Merrells Going to Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Merrell and their daughter, Miss Honor, are sailing on the Queen Mary next Wednesday to be abroad until early September.

Mrs. Picher Purcell arrived at home recently after a winter in Paris with plans to return to France in October or November to continue her studies in French. She will be at home with her mother, Mrs. Oliver S. Picher, in Glencoe this summer. Henry Picher, who was graduated last month from Harvard, will return to Harvard to take a post graduate course in English. Miss Muriel Picher also is at home this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Newcomet are at their home in Leland, Mich., for the summer after seeing their daughter, Miss Marian Newcomet, sail on a North Cape cruise.

Five young Evanstonians are sailing today from Montreal for a two months' motor trip through Spain, Italy, Germany, and France. They are Lucius and David Crowell, their cousins, Jane and David Watrous, and Esther Grulee.

Mrs. M. Lee Trobaugh is the former Ruth Clare Dennen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dennen of Maywood. Her marriage to Mr. Trobaugh took place June 25.

Straight Lines Important

JUNIOR GIRL'S SPORTS OUTFIT.

Simple, straight lines which are easily laundered and sewed are paramount in this smart suit for active sports. Junior girls will like this outfit for cycling, tennis, golf, and hiking, since it is comfortable and cleverly styled. The ensemble includes a smart halter top, a wisp of a bolero jacket, shorts styled in the English manner, without plaits, and a neat skirt which buttons down the side instead of in the middle, as is customary with such outfits.

If you are out for a day of sports activity and intend to be on the side-lines for events at the country club, you may be certain that the skirt and bolero will attire you suitably.

Gay cotton crash or other colorful prints in cotton or silk shirtings are lovely for this outfit. Shantung, piqué, and chintz also find favor for sports of this type.

Style No. 3343 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, and 19 years. Size 15 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Sally Warns Children to Use Care with Their Fireworks

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Watch out for those firecrackers today, boys and girls!

Every year on the day after the Fourth I hear of some of my little friends who've been careless with fireworks and matches and have been burned or injured. So please be careful.

In the first place, it hurts like everything, and in the second place, if you're all wrapped up in bandages you won't be able to come to my parties. If you wrote for an invitation to the Cubs-Brooklyn game next Thursday and find your name printed in tomorrow's TRIBUNE, you'll be mighty sorry you got too close to that torpedo and won't be able to use your invitation.

Fingers seem to be most frequently burned, and if yours are all blistered and sore, how are you going to write a letter in case you want to come to our next party? I'm going to tell you all about it in the SUNDAY TRIBUNE, and after you know what it is you can just bet your boots you'll want to be in on it—so, once more, I warn you, be careful!

BY MARY MEADE.

Happy Fourth of July, young cooks! And if you can tell your mother why we celebrate the Fourth, maybe she will let you make this patriotic candy about which we're going to talk today.

This won't take much time from your play and it will be a great deal of fun. Of course, we realize that we probably shouldn't be making candy again this week when we just finished eating the delicious peanut brittle we made last week. But then, this is an occasion. Besides, we think that children get far too much candy at Christmas time, and maybe not enough at other times.

Well, let's go to the kitchen, tie on our aprons, and make the candy. We will color some of it red [or perhaps just pink], leave some white, and the rest of it we will color not blue but green! Maybe not quite the colors of the flag, but almost. Then you can treat the family and the neighborhood pals if you like.

All set? Then gather together these things [my, but this will be fun, and it's so easy, too!]: Two cups powdered sugar, one egg, the green and red vegetable coloring bottles, and the bottle of peppermint flavoring.

1. Now break the egg carefully and separate the white into a bowl. Save the yolk for mother to use in cooking. You won't need it for the candy.

2. Add one tablespoon of water to the egg white. Beat with a dover egg beater until nice and frothy, but do not let the egg white become stiff.

3. Sift the powdered sugar into the bowl a little at a time and mix with a wooden spoon. When you have added about one cup, drop in one-quarter teaspoon of peppermint flavoring. Continue adding sifted sugar until the mixture becomes stiff.

4. Now leave the candy for a minute to wash your hands, for you are going to use them to knead the patriotic candy. Wash them carefully. Clean under your fingernails, too, for we must have this candy just as pure and clean as can be!

5. All right. Now take out the wooden spoon and pick up the candy mixture in your clean hands. Squeeze it and pat it and squeeze it some more until it becomes smooth.

6. Now separate the mixture into three balls. Leave one white and add red coloring to one and green to the other. You will need only a few drops of each. Poke a little hole in the ball, drop in several drops from the dropper that comes with the coloring bottle, or from a teaspoon. Now work the ball in your hands again until the color is even.

7. You now have three balls of candy, one rosy, one white, and one green. Now make small balls of them, flatten them out with the palm of your hand, and you're through! That is, unless there happen to be some nuts handy. Then you can place half a nut on top of each piece.

Brother, Sister Reunited Through Photo in Tribune

Hollywood, Cal., July 3.—[Special.]—Seventeen years ago fate separated Jack Dawn, makeup artist at M-G-M, from his sister. They tried in vain to locate each other. This week Dawn received a phone call from Dayton, O. His sister, now Mrs. Edith Wilson, called. She had seen a picture of Dawn making up some actors in an issue of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. As a result of the phone reunion Dawn is having his nieces, Betty and Jane Wilson, come to spend the summer in Hollywood.

According to CULBERTSON

RETURNING PARTNER'S LEAD.

The automatic return of partner's opening lead, for no better reason than that "since he led it he must know what he's doing," is one of the most glaring faults of average and lesser players. An opening lead, like every other play, should be given careful consideration, but most decidedly should not be held in awe and veneration as a sacred thing. Consider how easily the contract in today's hand could have been defeated if East had not been mired in the fallacy, "always return partner's opening lead."

North, dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

The opponents having bid every suit except clubs, West opened the deuce of that suit. East won with the ace and returned the five spot. Declarer, with a sigh of relief, went up with the king and cashed the queen, discarding dummy's ace and king of diamonds. He then rattled off the five card diamond suit and, with only two tricks needed for his contract, disdained the heart finesse to cash the ace and king.

East should have hung his head in shame. South's insistence on no trump certainly indicated strength in the unbid suit, clubs, and besides, there was a way of finding out the correct line of defense. East should have laid down the spade king and watched closely for his partner's follow suit card. If it were a low one the club then could be returned. But if West signaled with a high spade, which he would have done, playing the nine spot, the defense would have become clear. East-West merely would have to cash their three top spades and then lock dummy in with a diamond. If declarer had the queen of hearts no defense could avail, but if West had that card doubly guarded he would be certain to make it. Thus five tricks would have gone to the defenders by the surprisingly simple measure of keeping declarer out of his own hand.

Young Players to Give Benefit to Aid Ice Fund

The once quiet atmosphere of the Mayfair community out on the northwest side has been sadly shattered for the last two weeks. Out on the sidewalks at any hour of day may be heard the "wa-hoo's" of a young band of amateur Indians. In the alleys another group of children rehearse a shieking sports broadcast. In the front yards still other youngsters flit determinedly about.

It is all, according to Mrs. John C. Carroll, 4836 Lowell avenue, in preparation for the second annual benefit to be given for THE TRIBUNE Free Ice Fund by the children of Mayfair at 7:30 p. m. next Wednesday in the Mayfair Presbyterian church, Ainslie street and Kostner avenue.

The Mayfair benefit started last summer as a means of quieting nine little girls on a dull summer afternoon, but it met with such success that the ice fund realized $29.81 from the show.

Last year the benefit moved three times, from parlor to playroom to church, to accommodate the crowd. This year they are wondering whether the church—with tickets at five and ten cents "going like hot cakes"—will suffice. Last year the "nine little girls" put on two Mother Goose skits. This year a cast of 50 children will stage a pageant, "Our Flag," directed by Mrs. Estelle Flanders Green, and an hour of general entertainment.

Meanwhile, three new contributions for the free ice fund were received yesterday from readers of THE TRIBUNE. They are:

K. H.	$ 2.50
Anonymous	2.50
Mrs. Leo J. Strauss	2.00
Previously acknowledged	1,428.59
Total	$1,435.59

Out at Camp Algonquin, as some 300 children and mothers prepare for a happy Fourth of July, made spectacular with a fireworks display given by the E. F. Dunfield Fireworks company, an anonymous letter was received by THE TRIBUNE cashier, inclosing $9.10.

"To be used to send a child to camp for a week," was the simple explanation. Contributions to the Camp Algonquin fund include:

K. H.	$ 2.50
Anonymous	9.10
Anonymous	2.50
Previously acknowledged	346.01
Total	$361.01

If you can help, send your contribution to THE TRIBUNE cashier, Tribune Tower. It will be acknowledged gratefully. A gift of $9.10 will send a child to Camp Algonquin for ten days. A gift of $1 will keep a baby's milk cool for a week.

Old Grundy Is Down on Wives Who Step Out

BY DORIS BLAKE.

She is 30 and has three small children. She is full of life and fun, she reports. She loves to dance today as much as when she was 16, when dancing was the love of her life. She and her husband are as happy as any pair could be. But he doesn't dance. He doesn't like parties. And, most of the time, his job includes night work, so he couldn't take her out if he wanted to.

He says: "Go ahead. Get the boys to dance with you. You treat me right. Why shouldn't you have a good time?" And he means it, the wife tells. He is like that. Mother couldn't do a thing wrong. And mother doesn't want to do anything that would hurt him, her, or the children. That's why she writes to ask if it would be throwing herself open to criticism if she did go dancing once in a while with a bachelor in whom she has no personal interest [heaven knows] but who is a grand dancer and a friend of her husband.

If you, Mrs. Thirty and mother of three small children, saw our neighbor, Mrs. Jinks, 30 and mother of small children, out dancing with a personable bachelor, what would you think? And what would you love to tell the girls over the tea cups? You know right well that it would be a juicy bit to report and be passed on from mouth to mouth until it got to be quite a fair story, yes? And all the time, Mrs. Jinks, 30 and mother of youngsters, would be entertaining the idea that there wasn't a thing wrong, which there wouldn't be either, perhaps.

Or, take it another way, Mrs. Thirty and mother of three.

Suppose your husband, Mr. Thirty, liked to step out, and you didn't want to go. He was the dance crazy one. Could you sit home and visualize that man of yours rhumbaing around the dance floor with a girl with nimble dancing feet? You know darned well you couldn't!

After all, it isn't such a bad lot these days to have a man who answers your mate's description, kind and decent and loving and wanting you to have everything. You've got to pay for luck like that, in order to make it stay with you.

Children Often Reflect Wrong Parental Ideas

Learn Selfish and Unfair Tactics from Adults.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"How are things going, Mrs. Black? Are you keeping busy at this work you're trying out?" a woman asked of her elderly neighbor whose husband had been invalided for a long time.

"O, yes, I'm keeping busy," she said in a lukewarm way.

"Why, that's fine," said her friend.

"Well, it isn't exactly. You see I only charge 15 cents an hour for staying with children at night. It's all I can get because that's what the high school girls ask.

"But the trouble is that some women want so much for that 15 cents an hour. They want me to bathe and feed and discipline the children. And two of the women I go to will say at the end of three hours, 'Suppose we call it 35 cents?' If they go to a party and I stay until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, it seems to hurt them to figure it up, and they will calmly cut off an hour's pay."

Several women of my acquaintance are more than comfortable financially. Nothing is too much for them to spend for clothes, entertainment, or personal gratification, but when it comes to settling for work done, they haggle over wages, and finish by underpaying.

The grownup children in a number of these same families are carrying on in the manner of their parents.

Example is the most potent force in character training. Sometimes children need a word or two from us to crystallize a principle, but most of our attitudes children breathe in with the home atmosphere.

Money necessarily looms large in our lives and, as some one has said, you think more about it when you haven't it than when you have it. But a true valuation of money is only one of the many principles of living that our children absorb from us unless we fail them and they react against our wrong example. Of course parents are only human, but it makes you wonder sometimes, doesn't it?

IT'S YOUR COUNTRY
by CALEB

FEW things are more inescapable—even if you don't know it—than your proprietorship in this country. Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness were not reserved unto owners of real estate. Whether you own vast lands, or nothing, it's your country. It has assumed responsibilities in your connection—and you cannot avoid responsibilities to it.

Two common misconceptions dim the vision with which we view these responsibilities. One is the view that the country, symbolized by the government, is the concern of politicians. The other is the view that an administration assumes proprietorship and full responsibility upon election. If unconsciously you hold to these views, you are likely to stand aloof.

Politicians may do the talking, and political administrations may change and experiment—but the government and the country are yours, deep and abiding, down under it all.

You—and your fellows—turn the operation of government over to men of a faction. But they have less responsibility than you. Theirs is temporal, fleeting, and dies with their office. Their only lasting responsibility and privilege is no greater than yours—the proprietorship of their citizenship. Your proprietorship and your privilege are undying. For it's your country. You have inherited it or adopted it, as did your ancestors. In either event, its problems today are yours.

There are 12,000,000 unemployed in the United States. There are other millions, employed, who want what the unemployed could make. People in cities go hungry while food in the country decays. The pendulum of supply and demand swings crazily. The materials for an even prosperity are all at hand. They need to be brought together, articulated, coordinated. Can politicians do that?

The government is simply a device through which you may apply or regulate the cure. You cannot shrug at an administration's failures. They are partly yours. Someone else may be in the saddle. But you own the horse. The problems remain yours. They are more far-reaching, more deeply abiding, than any political administration.

The vote you cast doesn't relieve you of responsibility. The responsibility remains as long as the problems. And as long as your privilege remains to come and go and conduct yourself with reasonable liberty.

One hundred sixty years ago, the colonies faced grave and vital problems. It took thinking—study—understanding—and then action, to dissolve them. That must be your procedure.

It's your country and your money. Ponder the problems. Acknowledge your proprietorship in them. Give them your time. Then attack them, and they may not attack you—obliquely or directly—in years to come.

ROOSEVELT TALK OPENS NEW PARK ON SHENANDOAH

Praised as Example of CCC Efforts.

of the dedication today is the Rapidan camp where former President Herbert Hoover went often for fish and meditation. Hoover deeded the camp over to the use of future presidents. President Roosevelt thus far has not availed himself of the opportunity.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, under whose supervision the park will be developed and policed, however, gave "credit" to President Hoover for his gift, and also mentioned donations of wealthy men, who might on another occasion have incurred the New Deal stigma of "economic royalists."

Among the donors and their gifts were:

John D. Rockefeller Jr.	$163,631
Edsel Ford	50,000
George A. Ball	5,000
W. T. Grant	1,000

Authorized in 1926.

Congress passed legislation in 1926 authorizing the Shenandoah and Great Smoky mountains national parks. Toward the Shenandoah individuals contributed $1,200,000 and the Virginia legislature appropriated an additional million dollars.

The historical background of the Shenandoah valley through which the park runs was omitted from the dedication oratory of President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes. It was through this great valley that southern armies passed and thrust into the north during the civil war.

In the ancient fastnesses of the Shenandoah country live a quaint people who will be just as surely uprooted from custom and tradition by the flood of tourists as the native populations of the Tennessee valley has been by the power dams and reservoirs of the New Deal.

Driving out of Washington behind a police escort the presidential party stopped at Sexton knoll in the park for a picnic and then proceeded to the dedication. The President stayed at Charlottesville, Va., tonight. He will deliver his Fourth of July address tomorrow at the Monticello home of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, then will motor to Richmond to board the Potomac for a week-end cruise, returning to Washington Monday morning.

Announce Roosevelt Will Visit Governor of Canada

MONTREAL, Que., July 3.—It was announced today at Quebec that President Roosevelt will pay a visit to Governor General Lord Tweedsmuir, the former John Buchan, on July 31 at Quebec. The governor is spending the summer there. His official residence is at the Citadel, on the heights where Gen. Wolfe and Gen. Montcalm fought during the conquest of Canada by the British.

ORDER OF MOOSE DECIDES TO WAR ON COMMUNISM

Breaking a tradition of many years' standing, the international executive committee of the Loyal Order of Moose, in convention in the Hotel Sherman, adopted a resolution yesterday opposing communism and pledging itself to "support and preserve the constitution." The resolution also pledged opposition to any attempt to tax religious, educational, or charitable institutions.

Attorney Orville J. Taylor of Chicago, who presented the resolution, declared in a speech urging its adoption that there exists a clear issue of "communism against the constitution." He called upon all Moose lodges to uphold the parent body in its resistance to communistic influences.

Today William Anderson of Indianapolis, supreme vice dictator, will become supreme dictator, to succeed Walter S. Ruff of Canton, O. Anderson's successor as vice dictator will be William J. Egan of Newark, N. J.

Among yesterday's convention visitors were Judge Roy Williams of the Ohio Supreme court and Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Fourth on the Farm.

July 3, 1936.

Fourth of July on the experimental farms seems to be almost the same as Fourth of July in the city, so today all the farm workers and their families are shooting firecrackers, holding picnics, going fishing, playing baseball, attending theaters, and having the usual Independence day celebrations.

We "took inventory" the other day to find out how the various farm families were going to celebrate. The farm managers have reduced the work schedule, leaving only the necessary chores to be divided among the workers, so the sun won't be very high until the family plans start to materialize.

Art Wade, one of the workers on the Yorkville farm, is going to have a picnic in his own back yard. He and his sons are going back to the Rob Roy creek to try their luck with fishing poles, and if they are fortunate the main course of the picnic lunch will be fried perch or catfish. If the fishing isn't so good, Mrs. Wade and her daughters are all prepared. They have plenty of frankfurters ready.

Some of the other families are planning on picnics and baseball games, and the movie theaters near the farms will have a boost in business if the farm workers carry out their plans.

About the only ones who won't get a chance to celebrate are the guides who escort visitors around to the experimental plots, the poultry yards, and other points of interest. Holidays usually mean an increase in business for them, so they'll have to be on the job.

Birds Prowl for Food.

The Fourth of July evidently means nothing in the life of the wild game birds on the Wheaton farm. It's just another day to prowl through the long grass and hunt for food. It's fun to watch the speedy little pheasants, quail, and partridges in the grass. The way they can wriggle through the grass and hide when you want to watch them informs you that they know a lot of tricks in self-protection when they are young.

The nine English ringneck pheasants, first family to arrive on the premises, are now old enough to wander off to various corners of the farm, returning only when they know it's feeding time. There are also clutches of Mexican quail, mutant pheasants, and Chukar partridges in the game bird corner of the farm.

Isolate Black Swans.

The boys on the Wheaton farm are still debating the fate of the black swans. These swans' pugilistic abilities make them trouble makers for the white swans, Canada geese, and ducks on the pond. The latest decision is that the black birds are to be penned off in one corner of the pond where they'll have nothing to fight but themselves and the few turtles which are in the neighborhood.

In making the rounds of the ponds recently we found a good example of the lack of rain. A group of water lilies which were ten feet from the shore two weeks ago were on the shoreline. Unless we get some rain pretty soon we're afraid the water lilies are going to be plain land lilies.

SHERIDAN ROAD

By Helen Topping Miller

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Gracie Lincoln, a gunman's widow. The man murdered was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with suave Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother, Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. An attempt is made to kidnap Eden, but Field and his men rescue her. Field takes her to his mother's home, where she is kept secluded. Jack Garnett climbs roofs to talk to her from her window, and enlists her aid in helping him solve the mystery. Raquel Rusak, an older woman, is trying to force Coburn Faraday to marry her. While at a roadhouse with Raquel, Coburn sees his sister, Robin, come in with Sidney Creighton. Eden is brought home by Owen Field after the inquest. She goes with Garnett to see Gracie Lincoln, now married to Clint Jarvis, a taxi driver. Clint has been forced to drive the murderers of Grappi. Eden's grandmother is a friend of Mat Burke, district attorney. Eden promises to help Clint gain an audience with Burke.

INSTALMENT XVIII.

INNOCENT VICTIMS.

Eden felt quickly at ease under Mat Burke's eyes. She did not know that nothing so pleasing to view had graced that official chamber in many a year—that the old man was looking at her and remembering another Irish wisp of audacity he had known long years before. There was the same gallant chin, the same grave eyes, the same tender mouth and slim body with the spring of courage in every movement. There had been a day when young Mat Burke had been halfway in love with Georgie Dryman.

Eden rose quickly.

"You're very good to let me come here," she said.

He took her hand, and did not go back to the pontifical looking chair behind the desk, but pulled another close to her own and took a pipe from his coat pocket.

"I listen better when I smoke," he explained. "Your grandmother said you had something to tell me. Did you hold out on the coroner's jury?"

Eden shook her head. "I told them everything that I knew. I told them about finding Grappi dead in that taxicab, and that was true. I told them I knew nothing at all about it, and that was true too. But last night I heard something from a man who doesn't dare come to you himself——"

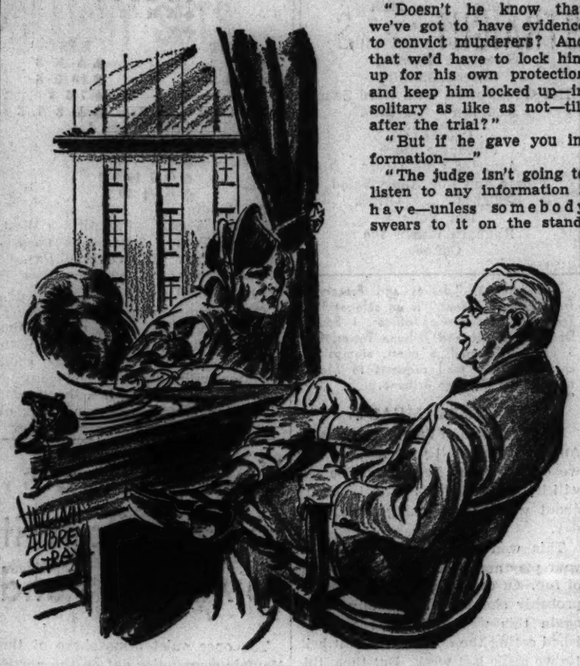
She told him the story then, not mentioning names, justifying young Clint Jarvis without revealing his identity, and Burke sat inscrutable, moving his long fingers round and round the bowl of his pipe.

"So—this chap knows who killed Grappi—and he'd like to trade us a couple of names for a ticket to some safe place?" he said, presently.

"Doesn't he know that we've got to have evidence to convict murderers? And that we'd have to lock him up for his own protection and keep him locked up—in solitary as like as not—till after the trial?"

"But if he gave you information——"

"The judge isn't going to listen to any information I have—unless somebody swears to it on the stand.



"How am I supposed to contact this information?"

Besides, I doubt if there's any place in this country where we could send this lad where he'd be safe. If he knows anything at all about this case he ought to know enough to know that." Burke rapped out the pipe. "How did he get mixed up with this mob—or didn't he tell you that?"

"He bought a taxi—" Eden hesitated. Jack Garnett had warned her about revealing too much. The police would harass Clint Jarvis—jeopardize everything—if she said too much.

Burke nodded. "He bought a taxi—and then Monk squared him with that racket—and then Monk wanted a little favor done——"

"You know about it already?"

"I know Monk's mob. How am I supposed to contact this information in case I decide to go after it?"

"You mustn't put him in jail—you must agree to help him get away. His wife——"

"He has a wife, has he?"

"Yes—and she has had trouble enough. She has a bad cough——"

"You say this young feller, Garnett, is befriending this taxi driver?"

"Yes—but I'm to carry a message. Whatever you want me to say——"

Martin Burke leaned his elbows on his knees and wrinkled his long mouth quizzically.

"You wouldn't be talking about Gracie, would you? Gracie Lincoln—and that young punk she married?"

Before she had control, Eden knew that her eyes had betrayed her. "O," she cried, "it isn't fair! You mustn't persecute them because of me! They trusted me. She had nothing to do with it—she is sick and pitiful——"

"Stir up any bloody mess in this town," Burke mused, looking absently at the rug, "and at the bottom of it you'll find Gracie! So Clint Jarvis sent you here. You're a kind-hearted girl, Eden Faraday. That's the Irish in you. Your grandmother was a kind-hearted woman too—always keepin' up some worthless little soubrette or stage hand down on his luck! She made a fortune and didn't save a cent! Then she married Bob Faraday because he was a lonely man with a soulful bass voice, singin' in the choir on Sundays."

"But—you must see—this was a confidence! They'll think I tricked them—they're both innocent victims——"

"Clint knows that if he breaks this case they'll get him," Burke argued. "They'd have to get him. They're on the run in this town—but they've got to keep their stragglers scared plenty—keep discipline inside the mob. We've broken the back of the beast, but," his voice took on a slow weariness, "its tail won't die till the sun goes down, I'm thinking."

"But you'll talk to him? Please—you'll try to do something——"

"If Clint came through for us we'd try to come through for him—but you can see that there's practically nothing we can do but put him in a safe place—if there is a safe place for Clint. You get word to him that I'll have one of the boys pick him up early tomorrow morning. Tell him to cruise his taxi here about seven."

"Thank you. Gran said you were a grand person."

"Did she?" he grinned, "That wasn't what I heard."

"And—you won't tell any one? If they—those people thought that I knew—that I was talking——"

"Dear child, I know that mob better than you do. I'll take care of you. Now," he pressed a button on his desk, "I'll send you home."

The door opened and Owen Field came in, with a promptness that indicated that he had been waiting. "Take this witness home," Burke ordered, with a grin, "I can't get anything out of her—maybe you can."

"But—I'm not going home," Eden argued, "I have to go back to work."

"It's after eleven—you can take time out for lunch, surely," Field argued.

"Mr. McLachlan——"

"We'll phone Mr. McLachlan that you're detained at this office. And in the meantime," Field was gallant, "how about a filet with mushroom sauce? I know a place only a jump away."

"It sounds enticing," Eden admitted. "Good-by, Mr. Burke—and thank you!"

"Good-by, young lady."

The restaurant was narrow, interestingly dim, with autographed photographs hung along the dark wood walls. Field ordered swiftly without glancing at the menu. Eden relaxed. She always enjoyed watching him in action, his smooth assurance, his assumption that the world had been created to serve him. If only there had not been that little touch of the dire about him, pomp and doom and the implacability of the law, all glided over with charm.

The woman who could fall in love with him would be forever cherished, admired, adored—but she would never be quite free. Never a person any more, rather a possession. She would have luxury and security—but she would have Sara Field for a mother-in-law and a little of Sara, dominating and slightly cold, in Sara's son.

Eden considered these things soberly, for her intuition told her that this tall, blond person was falling in love with her. It was in his voice, in the votive way he served her food.

War Trials of the Old South Made to Live

Margaret Mitchell's Book to Be Remembered.

"Gone with the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell. [Macmillan, $3.] Published on Tuesday. July choice of the Book of the Month club.
"Waterloo," by Manuel Komroff. [Coward-McCann, $2.50.] Published on Tuesday.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" is a remarkable book, a spectacular book, a book which is certain to be a sensation; a book which sounds as if it had been, but could never have been, written fifty years ago; a book that will not be forgotten. It is everything that a truly great book should be except stylistically great.

"Gone with the Wind" is compared with Tolstoi's "War and Peace." The theme of "Gone with the Wind" is a theme of war and peace, the story of the civil war and the reconstruction. The characters in "Gone with the Wind" have intense individuality. Every type lives in its pages as an individual without losing that faculty in conformance to type.

The "spirit" of the period—which is so much more intangible a background than the physical, and therefore infinitely more difficult to capture in print—is recorded, and as it should be recorded, not from the point of view of the historian looking back but from that of the contemporary participating. That quality of participation is remarkably well preserved in the vast, detailed panorama of the period [1,035 pages!].

If Miss Mitchell had had the literary genius of Tolstoi, "Gone with the Wind" would have been an American classic destined to be read as long as any one reads English [as "War and Peace" must always be a part of any rich literary knowledge]. She writes with great skill, infinite patience, a sense of what has a place and what hasn't in her narrative. The book is fascinating and unforgettable. But it is not the work of real genius, and to give the reader the impression that he is to find another "War and Peace" is to be unfair to the author.

"Gone with the Wind" opens with the rumors of war being laughed at by that highly organized, almost feudal, pleasure loving south and with its heroine imperiously and ruthlessly gathering beaux at her feet. Miss Mitchell has done that society without sentimentality, but with a deep understanding of its charms as well as its ineffectualness.

Some one remarks that a visitor is an arrogant devil and looks like one of the Borgias. Miss Mitchell writes: "Scarlett [the heroine of the book] thought quickly, but could remember no family in the county or Atlanta or Savannah by that name. 'I don't know him. Is he kin to them? Who are they?' An odd look came over Charles' face, incredulity and shame struggling with love. Love triumphed, and he realized that it was enough for a girl to be sweet and gentle and beautiful, without having an education to hamper her charms, and he made swift answer: 'The Borgias were Italians.' 'O,' said Scarlett, losing interest, 'foreigners.'"

But there was wild Irish blood in Scarlett O'Hara as well as the blood of a Savannah Robillard, and she had courage and toughness beyond most of the girls of her day. When she wanted something she tried scrupulously or unscrupulously to get it, and then made the best of what she could get.

The story of Scarlett O'Hara is a stirring tale in itself [with no false sentimentality about it]. But the remarkable story is what Scarlett lived through—the siege of Atlanta, the visit of Sherman's men to the plantation when by superhuman courage she had managed to return to it with Melanie and her day old child in a wagon behind a horse that died in his traces, murder, grinding physical labor, the threats of the Scalawags, "reconstruction" that nearly permanently razed the south, the gaudy days in Atlanta when profiteers lived on the fat of the leanest years in southern history.

The background of "Gone with the Wind" is magnificent in its assembling of details. They are set down with the vividness of a participant. They have at the same time the passion of the unreconstructed southerner and the impartiality of the well trained newspaper woman [Miss Mitchell was a feature writer on the Atlanta Journal for several years, and was born and raised in Atlanta, the scene of her novel].

Napoleon's Hundred Days the Background.

Another historic period is the background of "Waterloo," by Manuel Komroff—Napoleon's famous "hundred days." Urged by readers who found Napoleon in "Coronet" a character about whom they wished Mr. Komroff to write further, he has written "Waterloo." It is rather more of a retelling, day by day, hour by hour, with a few specially vivid imagined minutes, of the actual battle of Waterloo than merely a novel about Napoleon during those fateful hundred days. Mr. Komroff has a special skill in making scenes vivid, but nowhere in this book is exhibited the talent for story telling which makes "Coronet" a memorable tale.

There are occasional moments of dramatic fiction, the most vivid one where the little French boy and the little English boy, both wounded soldiers, are joyously playing with a toy sailboat in the ditch the water of which turns slowly from a colorless gray to deep red under their eyes. They see only the miracle of the little boat's floating as they dam the trickle in the ditch.

"Waterloo" has not really, although it seems to have, the vivid reality of first hand experience which all historical fiction should have per se, and exciting and memorable as some of its pages are, it is neither first class history nor first class fiction, nor first class historical fiction, but a vivid, often out-of-focus record of a few of the great decisive days of a period.

Mysteries of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK

Everything that Eden Phillpotts writes is sober and dignified, even his murder stories, and "A Close Call" [Macmillan, $2] falls well within this category. The murder curiously plotted to involve an innocent man, is described with calm detachment. A rural community in England is the scene and the crime breaks in on the quiet life of a simple people.

Scotland Yard investigates and withdraws, a strange and unsuccessful defense plea is put by a hopeless young lawyer and in the nick of time the murderer gives himself away, thus saving an innocent man and justifying the faith of his quiet, sweet daughter whose unlamented husband is the negligible corpse.

You won't bate any breath in reading this book nor will it keep you awake far into the night, but it is told with the skill of an old hand in his special, mildly charming way.

In "The Corpse with the Dirty Face [Morrow $2], R. A. J. Walling also nearly gets the wrong man hanged, but his methods are distinctly more sensational than Mr. Phillpotts'. Tolefree, who grows less whimsical and more satisfactory in each succeeding book which centers around him, works hard to save an innocent man whose friends, in mistaken zeal, do everything to abandon to the hangman.

But between the private investigator and Scotland Yard the rightful murderer is tracked down and all is well. A love story or two works its way into the plot and there is a good deal of rather confusing detail, but on the whole it's a book that will give you a pretty good time.

You may spot the guilty party before Inspector Pierce of the Yard or even Mr. Tolefree does, but, since you won't do it until after you have had a run for the money, it is that much to the good.

Stage and Pen Figure in New Memory Book

British Author Outspoken and Anonymous.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—"Anonymous, 1871-1935" [Murray] is the title of a new book of reminiscences about which I think there will be considerable curiosity. The author is a woman of wide experience who has spent much time in the theatrical and literary worlds, and whose memory goes back to days when Henry James and Oscar Wilde, Whistler, Annie Besant, Bernard Shaw, W. S. Gilbert, and many more were making the talk of the day as surely as younger men do now.

But the memory does not stop in ancient days. It comes up very nearly to the present, so that names of immediate interest crop up like flowers in a garden. The anonymous writer has her views upon modern novels; she knows many living authors [as well as actors and actresses], and she has much to tell of a number of people about whom we are all curious.

When I add that the book is written with great charm and outspokenness [that is one reason for anonymity], it will be clear that it is unusually entertaining. One reads, one agrees or disagrees, one laughs, and one turns back to past pages to read again what is printed there. No wonder the dust cover of the English edition is covered with marks of interrogation! A few exclamation points would also be in place.

I am told that the book is to be followed by another. It will be welcome. Meanwhile, the author has retired from the hurly burly and lives in a Dorset village. I think she will keep most of her friends.

John Guthrie [but that is not his real name], the New Zealand author who wrote "The Little Country" and made his name by it, has been visiting London. His publishers gave him a cocktail party at the Café Royal which was well attended by dwellers in the literary world here; and they will publish his new novel, "So They Began," during the present month.

The publishers are Messrs. Nelson, who in the matter of fiction are advised by L. A. G. Strong; and they are firm believers in Mr. Guthrie's exceptional talent, which, although it is concentrated upon themes of greatest interest to those who live in New Zealand, has a universal quality calculated to give it a wider appeal.

An experienced English detective has been reading an English mystery tale, and as a result of that experiment he says he thinks less than ever of the writers of mystery stories.

But this is not quite the attitude of Supt. Cornish, late of Scotland Yard; and for a book entitled "Six Against the 'Yard'" [Selwyn & Blount], to which six authors [Dorothy Sayers, Margery Allingham, Freeman Wills Crofts, Russell Thorndyke, Anthony Berkeley, and Father Ronald Knox] have contributed baffling mysteries, he has written postscripts which show how a real detective of immense skill and prestige would attack the problems posed.

DISCOVERY HAS HUGE TASK IN $10,000 STAKE

Weight Only Menace to Champion.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Hand in hand with the thrill of watching world famous horses strive for the $10,000 prize that goes with the running of the Stars and Stripes handicap at Arlington Park this afternoon comes the persistent question to the thousands who will witness the race of whether it's the sporting thing to do to weight a horse down to that point where it is possible for a less able horse to beat him.

They've demanded that Discovery carry 138 pounds in this mile and a furlong sweepstakes. That is 38 pounds more than one of his rivals is carrying in the race—Calumet Dick, a horse which only this week ran the fastest mile of the year in Chicago. It is 16 pounds more than any of his rivals will shoulder, and these include such awe inspiring performers as the giant horse Whopper, the sensational Roman Soldier, the double Derby winner Hollyrood, and fleet Myrtlewood, which broke a world's record at Arlington a year ago.

Weight Only Can Beat Him.

Forgotten by most of those in the holiday throng of 40,000 will be this all-important difference in the weights if Discovery is beaten in the Stars and Stripes. A new hero will be acclaimed.

The crowd will depart carrying with it the erroneous idea that Myrtlewood or St. Bernard or Azucar has beaten Discovery. The correct analysis of that situation would be that the weights and not the horse had beaten Discovery.

Enough to frighten any one, of course, is Discovery's record. Out of 24 races during the last two years he has been victorious in 14 of them. Weight and weight alone cost him those other 10 victories.

In addition to holding four track records at distances ranging from a mile and a furlong to a mile and a quarter he holds two world records. One is at a mile and an eighth which he ran in 1:48 1-5 at the Aqueduct track on June 22 of last year. The other is at a mile and three-sixteenths in 1:55 made at Narragansett Park last September. He carried 119 pounds.

Ever since it was added to the Arlington program eight years ago, the Stars and Stripes has been one of the most thrilling races of the year there. Some great horses have won it. Other great horses have been beaten in this stake. Sun Beau, the world's greatest money winner, tried twice for the prize and failed both times. Misstep was beaten twice.

Great Names Among Winners.

Col. E. R. Bradley's great Blue Larkspur won it back in 1930 and C. V. Whitney's champion Equipoise won it in 1932. Surprise winners of the race were Val Crane's Dowagiac in 1929 and Plucky Play in 1931.

The largest field in the history of the stake seems assured for this afternoon's renewal, there having been fifteen named in the overnight field. Spanish Babe, a recent double winner at Hawthorne, drew No. 1 post position and the speedy Myrtlewood will break from the No. 6 stall. Whopper drew No. 11 and Discovery No. 5.

The starting position usually doesn't mean much to Discovery. He has won most of his races in the stretch. The race followers evidently believe he will do a lot of running in the stretch today, for he was installed as the overnight favorite at even money.

A pleasure unalloyed would be the chance to see just what Discovery would do to his rivals today unhampered by the great leveler—the guy who imposes the weights because of superior ability. The eye in the sky could take the day off.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Italo Chelini, 21 year old White Sox lefty, yesterday made his second major league start, pitched his second complete game in six days, and beat the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 5, for the second 1936 Chicago victory over the lads from the shores of Lake Erie. Italo was aided ever so much in his victorious performance by those two brilliant Big Six batsmen, Luke Appling and Rip Radcliff, and a defensive cast that was swell in all except one harmless inning.

The Indians peppered the youngster for 10 hits, including six doubles. However, half of the hit total and half the doubles total came in the fifth inning, which gave the Indians a 4 to 1 lead. The other Cleveland run came in the ninth on a double and a pinch single. The rest of the time Italo worked with great skill.

Appling Hits Homer.

Getting back to the socking firm of Appling & Radcliff: Appling drove in the first run with a single in the fourth. Radcliff doubled for the main stroke in the production of two runs in the fifth which set the score at Cleveland 4, Chicago 3. Appling tied the score with his No. 3 homer in the sixth, and with two out in the seventh put the Sox ahead when he drove in the fifth run with a single. With two out in the eighth Radcliff singled to drive home what proved to be the winning run. Appling batted .750 for the day and Rip had to be content with a mark of .600.

The game was the second the Indians have played here this year. They have lost both their Chicago games. The teams have played five games in Cleveland, all of which were won by the Indians. Doubleheaders today and tomorrow are expected to upset this home success business, but the Sox hope not, of course.

Scoring Starts in Fourth.

Lehman Swamps Salomon, 10 and 9, to Win Golf Title

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

John Lehman, the Olympia Fields golfer, who has been on a self-imposed diet of competitive swinging through the last few years because of business cares, yesterday presented a one man show at the Sunset Ridge Country club entitled, "The Return of John Lehman, or How to Win a Championship."

The title in question was the 23d annual amateur championship of the Chicago District Golf association, and the curtain climax of his production was a smashing 10 and 9 victory over Sid Salomon of St. Louis in the 36 hole final. The tempo of the entire script was as stunning as its finale, for John was three under par for the 27 holes necessary to conclude it. It was one of the most convincing match play decisions ever scored in the Chicago district, including such highlights as six birdies and one eagle.

Goes After Western Crown.

Thus the name of John Lehman, long one of Chicago's major actors on the amateur big time, joins those of Bob Gardner, Jack Westland, Dick Martin, and George Dawson in a place on the Joe G. Davis trophy, which will now take up a year's residence at Olympia Fields.

The 29 year old Lehman, whose dark hair is prematurely silvered, last night admitted that the golf he played throughout the year's C. D. G. A. championship is the best he has turned since he won the western amateur of 1930, following a brilliant career at Purdue university. He plans to go after the western once more, when the 1936 show opens at Omaha on July 14.

Lehman's victory in the C. D. G. A. is his first in three attempts to win it. Several years ago he was eliminated in the first round and met the same fate last year, when Fred Haas of New Orleans ultimately won the title.

Salomon Never Has Chance.

The brave Salomon had nary a chance yesterday, as Lehman's clubs flailed around Sunset Ridge. At the ninth hole of the morning round, Sid was just two down. Nine holes later, after Lehman's finishing 33, three under par, he was six down. No fourth nine was necessary, for Johnny did the first nine thereof in a fancy 34, one under par.

Salomon won the morning second hole where Lehman was short of the green. Sid then put his second shot to the third in the rough, and Lehman took the fourth with a 15 foot putt for a birdie. Salomon missed a short putt to win the fifth, and both over reached par at the sixth, John three putting and Sid trapping his second. Lehman then birdied the 548 yard seventh by holing a five footer, and took the eighth, when the St. Louis star missed the green. John was only two up after the ninth, however, overshooting the green.

Shoots Eagle on 13th.

Salomon missed the 10th green, and Lehman was only a yard from the 11th flag for another birdie. He then needed three from the edge of the 12th, but came back with an eagle on the 486 yard 13th, sending his spoon second a yard from the pin. Sid was trapped at the 15th, and was six down after the 149 yard 17th, where John holed a 35 foot try for a deuce.

In the afternoon, Johnny lost the second by failing on a three foot putt, but took the next two, Sid three putting the third and finding a trap at the fourth. Lehman then took the 6th with a ten foot birdie putt, the 7th with a par five, and the 170 yard 8th with a tee shot to within five feet of the cup for a deuce. A half in par fours at the 9th ended the day. The cards:

PERRY DEFEATS VON CRAMM IN STRAIGHT SETS

WIMBLEDON, England, July 3.—[Special.]—For the third year in a row, Fred Perry of England won the All-England tennis championship today by vanquishing Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0.

The Briton's victory, achieved before a gallery of 25,000 wildly enthusiastic fans gave him the distinction of being the first champion to win the trophy three times in succession since Anthony Wilding's feat in making it three straight in 1910, 1911, and 1912.

It was the second time Perry and Von Cramm had opposed each other in All-England finals, the Briton having defeated his German rival last year to the tune of 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Torn Muscle Is Alibi.

For his defeat today, the most crushing suffered by any finalist in the history of the Wimbledon championship singles, Von Cramm had the alibi of a torn muscle in his thigh, an injury which he suffered in his first service. Immediately upon the conclusion of the match, which went through in wirlwind fashion, the whole affair lasting less than an hour, Von Cramm asked the referee to announce his injury to the crowd and to apologize to them for the poor showing he confessed to having made.

Perry on the other hand, was his usual brilliant self and observers commented that he apparently could do nothing wrong or even to the mildest criticism. He was dazzling at every stage of the game and in every move he made.

Miss Jacobs in Finals.

In the women's donbles today Helen Jacobs of California and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Massachusetts advanced to the finals by defeating Mrs. Phyllis Hudford King and Joan Ingram of England, 6-4, 6-3.

Kay Stammers, defending champion, and Freda James bested Mme. Sylvia Herotin of France and Dorothy Andrus of New York, 6-0, 6-4, in the semi-finals, thus putting them in line to meet Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Fabyan.

Fred Wilde and Charles Hare of England defeated Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, in the men's doubles.

Perry Gets Pro Offer.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Bill O'Brien, tennis promoter, today cabled Fred Perry another offer to join his professional troupe following the Briton's victory over Baron Gottfried von Cramm in the Wimbledon tournament. Perry has turned down offers from the American promoter several times during the last two years.

"I told Perry I would give him $50,000 in advance for a four months' tour starting on Jan. 1," O'Brien said.

Degener Takes Springboard Title, Wins Olympic Berth

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Richard Degener of the Detroit Athletic club won the United States springboard diving championship yesterday afternoon at the Burnham park lagoon. Degener, who had led the field of six qualifiers in the morning eliminations, scored 163.7 points on his ten dives from the three meter board.

Al Greene of Chicago's Lake Shore Athletic club was second with 159.69 points. He was closely pressed by Marshall Wayne of the Biltmore Athletic club, Miami, Fla. Wayne, who is the National A. A. U. platform diving champion, had 159.26 points. These three boys will compose the American team in the Olympic springboard competition next month at Berlin.

How Others Fared.

James Patterson of Ohio State university was fourth with 154.3 points, Albert Patnick of Columbus, O., was fifth, with 153.7, and Frank Fehsenfeld of the Indianapolis Athletic club was sixth, with 146.13.

George W. Graves of Detroit, American swimming representative to the International Federation, conducted yesterday's springboard events. The judges were Harry Hazelhurst, Chicago Athletic association; A. H. Pritzlaff, director of physical education for the Chicago schools; Elver Halverson, Exmoor Country club; Sam Greller, Jewish Peoples Institute; Clark Leach, Union League club; Walter Colbath, former American champion and Northwestern university star, and Werner Gerhard of the Chicago parks.

Degener won because of superiority in the five optional dives. At the conclusion of the five required dives he trailed both Wayne and Greene. Degener's best effort was his execution of a back one and a half somersault.

Nearly Loses Out.

Just as Degener took off for a one and a half gainer somersault pike position one of the movie cameras started with a sharp whir and he hit the water with a tremendous splash. After a conference of the judges and referee it was decided Degener would be permitted to perform this dive a second time. Had the decision gone against him the loss in points on this one dive, so close was the competition, would have eliminated him.

The water was 62 degrees, a severe handicap, and the stiff northeastern breeze was no help.

Fullerton, Cal., defeated the Downtown St. Louis Y. M. C. A., 6 to 3, in a game that started the Olympic water polo eliminations. The St. Louis team motored to Chicago and arrived only two hours before being scheduled to play.

Detroit Wins by Default.

Pittsburgh defaulted to the Detroit Athletic club in the only other first round game. The other teams advanced to the quarter finals on byes.

The Los Angeles Athletic club defeated the second team of the New York Athletic club in the opening quarter final round game, 4 to 1. The Los Angeles team, which represented the United States in the Olympic water polo in 1932, has not been defeated since losing to Hungary in the Olympics.

The New York Athletic club's first team reached the semi-finals by taking a thrilling battle from the California Collegians, a team composed of California, California at Los Angeles, and Stanford university players. The score was 3 to 2.

Williams of N. Y. A. C. scored in the first half to give his team a 1 to 0 lead at the three minute intermission. Melvin Sellers of the Collegians tied it early in the second half. Then Ray Rudy, star of the New York team, crashed through to score twice. Thirty-one seconds before the final gun Dixson Fiske of the Collegians slipped the ball into the net from three feet out. New York then took the ball and stalled to the finish.

DON LASH SETS AMERICAN MARK IN 10,000 METERS

Princeton, N. J., July 3.—(AP)—Running the fastest 10,000 meters ever recorded by an American, Donald Lash of Indiana proved himself this country's premier distance racer this evening by running away with the combined A. A. U. national championship and Olympic final tryout. Lash negotiated the distance, approximately six and one quarter miles, in 31 minutes, 6.9 seconds.

Competing on the famous Palmer stadium track, where he broke Pavvo Nurmi's world two mile record three weeks ago, the 22 year old Indiana collegian clinched his place on the 1936 American Olympic team with a superb performance, but he wasn't quite equal to the task of dislodging another of the flying Finn's records.

Sprints to Finish.

Lash finished like a sprinter while a small crowd cheered and the flashlights popped, but his time was slightly more than a minute behind the world record of 30.06.2 set by Nurmi in 1924, at the height of his career.

The Hoosier nevertheless wiped out the mark of 31.24, set by Tom McDonough of the Boston A. A. at Cambridge, Mass., in 1932, and the best previous performance ever registered by an American citizen. The listed national record of 30:11.4 was made by Jan Kusocinski, Polish star, in winning the last Olympic 10,000 meter race at Los Angeles.

On his way to triumph Lash passed the six mile mark in 30 minutes 9.6 seconds, thereby hanging up a new American record for the distance. It displaced the 23 year old national standard set by the first of Finland's great Olympic champions, Hannes Kolesmainen, who was clocked in 30:20.4 in 1913 at New York. The best previous mark by an American citizen for six miles was 30:43.4, set by W. J. Kramer at Cambridge, Mass., in 1912.

Millrose Athlete Second.

Setting the pace from the start, Lash broke the tape more than 100 yards ahead of Eino Pentti, Finnish-American star of the Millrose A. A. The stocky New Yorker nevertheless clinched an Olympic berth, along with the third place man, Stanley Wudyka, of Philadelphia, who finished a good furlong behind Pentti, in third place.

Lash's performance topped the first half of the two day championship athletic show. Seven meet records were shattered during the complete National A. A. U. junior title program, which paved the way for the country's foremost track and field stars to shine tomorrow in the national senior championship meet.

Indiana university team mates of Lash contributed to the record breaking as the New York Athletic club captured the junior team championship with 26 points. Dan Caldemeyer of Indiana won the 110 meter high hurdles in 14.5 seconds. Another speedy Hoosier, Marmaduke Hobbs, romped off with the 800 meter run in 1:52.8 to set another meet mark.

COUNT MORSE IS VICTOR IN FAST ARLINGTON MILE

Warren Wright Colt Wins in Impressive Style.

Count Morse, the son of Reigh Count-Nellie Morse, which races for Warren Wright of Chicago, served notice yesterday on candidates for Arlington Classic stakes that they had better be on their toes.

The Count went to the post in the Kenmore purse at a mile, the best race on the program. He made a show of the 3 year olds which tried to keep pace with him. He raced in front by a margin of four and five lengths all through the early stages. Finally after Jocky Arcaro pulled him up to a slow gallop he won by three lengths with Col. E. R. Bradley's Baby Talk second and Coldstream farm's Albania third.

Count Morse was at odds on in the betting, paying $3.80. He ran the mile in 1:38 1-5. His looks and general deportment indicated that he may be one of the great 3 year olds of the year. On his breeding he could easily be the best.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt came west by plane from New York Thursday night to see Discovery run in the Stars and Stripes handicap today. He was at Arlington at dawn yesterday to supervise Discovery's final test for speed which was three furlongs very easily in :35 3-5.

Polly Hastings, the daughter of Peter Hastings-Irish Polly which won the first race yesterday is reported to be the best 2 year old filly in the big Dixiana stable.

Garden Message, public enemy No. 1 as far as the horse players are concerned, finally won a race yesterday. He trimmed a band of sprinters in the seven furlong second number. It was the first victory he had scored in 42 starts. In most of those engagements he had been heavily backed. He paid $7.80 for a two dollar ticket.

Post time for the Stars and Stripes handicap this afternoon will be at 5:05 o'clock. Clem McCarthy is coming on from New York to broadcast the running over a coast to coast N. B. C. hookup.

Edward F. Seagram's Stand Pat, second to Whopper in the Pontchartrain handicap at Detroit last Saturday, arrived unexpectedly in charge of Trainer Frank Gilpin yesterday morning. He came for his engagement in the $10,000 Stars and Stripes handicap and his presence will add an international flavor to the race as his owner conducts the leading racing stable in the Dominion of Canada.

Advance luncheon and box reservations for the holiday racing indicate that Arlington Park officials likely will entertain the largest crowds in the history of Chicago's biggest racing center. Special race trains will start running from the Northwestern station at 12:30 instead of 12:45 as on weekdays.

POLLY HASTINGS, quick to begin and saving ground when racing under mild restraint the first three-eighths, came around FOUR ELEVEN in the final eighth and drew out fast. Latter, forced to race wide when moving to the lead with a rush in the first three-sixteenths, displayed fine speed, but tired in the final sixteenth. RAFTER, far out of it for more than three-eighths and brought to extreme outside in stretch, closed with extraordinary speed.

GARDEN MESSAGE, well up from the start and raced a trifle wide after the first quarter, wore down THE POINT under strong pressure and appeared to have little left. DANDY JAY, forced the early pace under restraint, readily submitted to the winner on stretch turn, but held on well. BOOM'S PAL began to improve his position when racing wide on the stretch turn, went inside in final quarter and closed with determination.

ODDESA GIRL, under energetic riding from the start and on outside throughout, slowly won down PATTY CAKE in a hard drive and appeared ready to draw out. PATTY CAKE, closing speed from the start and saving ground after the first three-sixteenths, held on with determination until within a few strides of the finish. CUBS KILL TIME FIGURING HOW TO PASS CARDINALS

French, Lee Pitch Against Pirates Today.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 3.—Having no manual labor on their hands, the Cubs turned to arithmetic as a time killer today. The problem involved how to get home in first place, and the answer, at least on paper, was so simple that all of Charley Grimm's pennant seeking pupils drew a 100 per cent grade. However, the on paper answer can't become official until the problem is worked out on the ball field with similar results and that's where complications may be encountered.

During the next two days here the champions will battle the Pirates in three games, two of them tomorrow afternoon. In the same two days the top perch St. Louis Cardinals will be confronted with four battles against the so-called raging Reds. If the Cubs can win two here and the Reds hold the Cardinals to an even break, the answer will be just what the Chicago boys figured today on paper. It will put them in front by a matter of points and they'll return home with that prize in their possession.

Grimm Decides on Pitchers.

Between his duties as manager of the National league All-Star team for the game at Boston next Tuesday and his responsibilities as Cub boss, Grimm had to do some intensive master minding before settling on his pitchers for tomorrow and Sunday. He thinks he has worked it out so that neither the Cubs nor the league will suffer.

Larry French will work in the first half of tomorrow's double-header, probably drawing Cy Blanton as an opponent. Bill Lee will swing into action in the second game, probably against Mace Brown, and for Sunday's battle Tiny Roy Henshaw will trot forth to learn whether he is as good as last season when he won seven games from the Pirates. He made the experiment once this spring and the Pirates pinned back his ears with four runs in the ninth.

Davis, Warneke Saved.

If the above three pitchers can get by without requiring any expert assistance, it will leave Curt Davis and Lon Warneke in fresh condition for the All-Star engagement. Whether Grimm will use both of them that afternoon is doubtful, but he wants them ready. It is his idea to be prepared in case the other managers whose star pitchers have been booked for the game fail to coöperate.

Last year the Cardinals worked Dizzy Dean just before the All-Star spectacle at Cleveland. The Giants refused to let Carl Hubbell take a hand, their argument being that they fulfilled their duty by supplying another member of their staf, Hal Schumacher. Both the famous Dizzy and Hubbell are being counted on by Grimm for the impending game, but he may be fooled.

If necessary he can use Van Lingle Mungo, Davis, and Warneke for three innings apiece, but his eventual picks probably will be Dean, Hubbell, and Davis, granted that Dean and Hubbell are excused from work between now and the appointed hour.

The only statement Grimm has furnished is that he is going to let Gabby Hartnett catch the entire game.

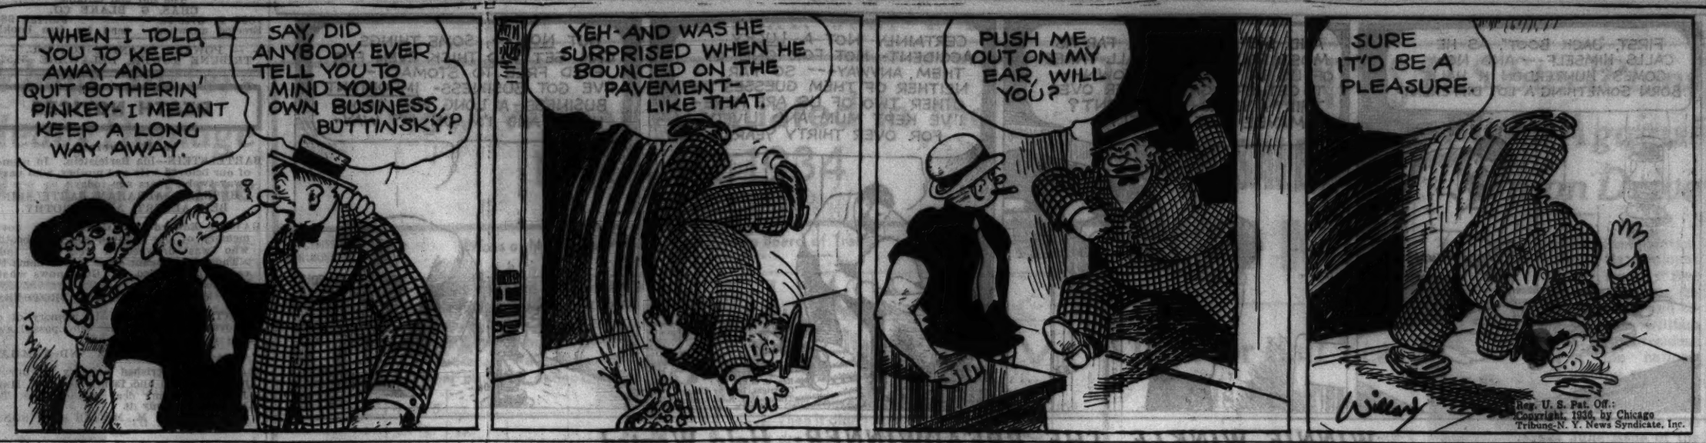
MOON MULLINS—THE OUTCAST



Chelini, Sox Hand Indians 6 to 5 Defeat

Sox Have Some Fun.

The Sox also had some fun in the latter half of the fifth before they got snuffed out by a double play. Dykes was hit by a pitched ball and was forced by Sewell. Chelini singled to right and Radcliff lined a double to right, Sewell scoring and Chelini stopping at third. Kreevich grounded to Knickerbocker, who elected to make a play at third, but Radcliff slid under Hale. Chelini scored in the meantime. Then Haas grounded into a double play.

One was out in the sixth when Appling tied the score with his homer, a powerful shot high into the lower deck of the left field stand. When Hayes lined a double to right Hildebrand replaced Blaeholder. Hildebrand walked Dykes. Then Hughes made a nice sprint into center for Sewell's pop fly, and Chelini grounded out.

Appling Hits Again.

Dykes walked at the start of the Sox eighth and reached second while Pytlak was throwing out Sewell after dropping a third strike. Chelini fanned, but Radcliff came through with a single to left, which scored Dykes. Kreevich singled to left, but Haas flied to Weatherly.

RAID NETS TEN IN SWEEPSTAKES TICKET RACKET

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—In a succession of quick raids, following months of surveillance and investigation, police and federal agents from the local division of the post office department today arrested ten prisoners, two of them women, and confiscated a van load of mailing lists, mailing paraphernalia and more than 1,000,000 sweepstakes tickets.

After questioning the prisoners and booking them for violation of section 386 of the U. S. criminal code which deals with using the mails for distributing lottery tickets, the authorities said they believed the raids had smashed the largest distribution headquarters for the Irish Free States Hospitals' sweepstakes in the United States.

100 WOMEN TRACK ATHLETES START OLYMPIC TRIALS

Providence, R. I., July 3.—(AP)—More than 100 of the nation's greatest women track athletes were here tonight ready for the final Olympic tryouts tomorrow. The winners of the first three places in each of the Olympic events will gain a place on the United States Olympic team.

Chief interest will center in the performances in the 100 meter dash of Miss Helen Stephens, Fulton, Mo., flash, who is being hailed by midwest track followers as another Babe Didrikson, and of Miss Betty Robinson, Chicago's Olympic dash winner in 1928, who is essaying a come-back campaign after being severely injured in an airplane crash in 1931.

Talking It Over

(Copyright: 1936: By The Chicago Tribune.)

GUS SUHR, Pirates' first baseman, is said to be the only ball player who comes close to Jimmy Caveney's record in changing from a diamond uniform to street togs. . . . Caveney, former Cincinnati infielder, now retired, could jump into his street clothes and leave the park before half of the bleacher customers had reached the exits. . . . University of California at Los Angeles has given the annual Gimbel award for outstanding combination of scholarship and athletic ability to a colored boy, Jimmy Lu Valle, 440 yard runner, and a Phi Beta Kappa. . . . Among the reasons why Rogers Hornsby fined Rollie Hemsley $300 were putting frogs in the berths of his teammates, hiding shoes of the players on the train, and knitting on trains. . . . Bill Cissell, formerly of the White Sox, now with Baltimore, lost two homers this year when his drives hit light poles and cracked back into the playing field. . . . The East India Olympic team has requested generous portions of curry in its food and notified German authorities it does not eat beef or pork. . . . The Finns have requested plenty of milk. . . . The Argentines have ordered meat three times a day. . . . The Esthonians have ordered that none of their meals be prepared in oil. . . . Sweet potatoes will be served American athletes occasionally. . . . Although Europeans know little about grapefruit, 105,000 have been ordered for the Olympic village. . . .

Johnny Broaca of the Yankees, who pitched 14 complete games in 1935, has gone the limit only twice this year. . . . He was knocked off the mound nine times. . . . Don Lash of Indiana lost five and a half pounds during the course of the 10,000 meter run at the central Olympic trials in Milwaukee last week. . . . The Giants continue to be the snootiest of the ball clubs in the matter of living arrangements on the road. . . . For instance, they stay at a country club in Philadelphia and in Chicago patronize one of the doggiest of the north shore residential hostelries. . . . Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees played second base for Wilkes-Barre when it set a record of 25 consecutive victories in 1912. . . . Max Schmeling served five years in the German cavalry and is an expert horseman. . . . Jimmy Twohig, who for years was A. A. Stagg's expert on conditioning the athletic fields at the Midway, held the winning number at the drawing for the grand prize at the party given by St. Thomas the Apostle church last Sunday night. . . . The prize was a new car or $500 in cash. . . . Reed Kelso, captain of last year's Indiana university eleven, is preparing for the state bar examination. . . . He plans to practice law in New Albany, Ind., his home town. . .

Among Notre Dame's "dumb guards" next fall will be John Lautar, who averages 87.57; Joe Kuharich, who averages 87.44; Harvey Foster, who averages 85.12; Joe Ruetz with 84.75; Jim Martin with 84.54, and Elmer Zenner with 80.27. . . . An average of 85 for four years is good enough for honors upon graduation. . . . Everett Purdy, one time member of the White Sox, later with the Cincinnati Reds, is owner-manager of the Lincoln team in the Nebraska State league. . . . When the inimitable Babe Herman appeared on the field wearing the red pants which were the mode for the Cincinnati boys when they played their recent night game with the Cubs, a friend in a box seat yelled: "Hello, Babe, how d'y feel?" . . . "Silly," was the Babe's reply. . . . Syd Cohen, the Senator's rookie pitcher, is a brother of Andy Cohen, former New York Giants second baseman. . . . Clare Dennis of Australia has been forced to cancel defense of her Olympic breast stroke championship because of an infected foot. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—State's Attorney Crowe and Homewood racing officials agreed to a truce and it was announced that betting would be allowed at the track. . . . The league leading Cincinnati Reds defeated St. Louis, 7 to 2, and shoved the Cardinals back in third place. . . . Charley Root pitched the Cubs to a 2 to 0 victory over the Pirates. . . . The second place White Sox beat Detroit, 7 to 2.

Olympic Club Wins.

The Olympic club of San Francisco had no difficulty with the Detroit Yacht club, winning, 8 to 1, after a half time advantage of 4 to 0. Hanna scored San Francisco's first three goals. Harold De Orlow, left back on the Detroit team, was injured in the second half from a blow on the side of the neck and was forced from the game.

This afternoon the high platform championship will be decided beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The semi-final polo games will follow the diving from the 10 meter platform. Marshall Wayne is the national A. A. U. champion in this event in which Degener, yesterday's victor, also will compete.

GALE VI. WINS 1ST OF ELIMINATION YACHT RACES

The first of five elimination races for the Lake Michigan star class championships was won by Gale VI. yesterday, off Belmont harbor. Harry Nye is owner-skipper of Gale VI.

The Pirie brothers, S. C. Jr. and L. M., fought it out for second and third places in their two matched craft. Gemini, S. C. Pirie Jr.'s defending Lake Michigan champion, was second, and Twin Star, L. M. Pirie's entry, was third.

A short time after the star boats finished their race of 10 miles a fleet of larger cruising and racing yachts began their 78 statute mile run to Milwaukee from the same point off Belmont harbor. Off Montrose harbor it appeared to observers that Bagheera and Elizabeth were battling for the lead. Rubaiyat and Bangalore were not far behind.

Kennedy and Cain Will Pitch for Sox in Today's Games

Vern Kennedy and Sugar Cain will pitch this afternoon's double-header for the White Sox. Willis Hudlin and Thornton Lee will work for the Cleveland Indians.

La Grange friends of Bruce Campbell made a big success of their special day for the popular Cleveland outfielder. They gave Bruce a floral horsehoe, a traveling bag, and other gifts.

There will be another double-header tomorrow between the White Sox and the Indians. One carload of White Sox will leave tomorrow night for Boston, a party of about a dozen who will witness the all-star game Tuesday. The Sox open with the Red Sox in Boston on Thursday.

When Rip Radcliff singled in the third inning yesterday, he ran his total to 12 games successively in which he has secured a hit.

MILLS, SPENCERS PLAY WEEK-END DOUBLE-HEADERS

Tigers Pound Browns for 9-5 Victory

St. Louis, Mo., July 3.—(AP)—Roxie Lawson, Detroit Tiger pitcher, had four jittery innings today, but he pulled through, aided by heavy slugging on the part of his mates, and the St. Louis Brown were subdued, 9 to 5.

The Browns scored three runs off him in the fourth, another in the fifth, their last in the seventh and had him mopping his brow in the tenth, but could not overcome an early lead the world champions built up off Less Tietje.

Charley Gehringer, Tiger second baseman, got three hits, including a homer and a double. Jack Burns, traded by the Browns to the Tigers for Elon Hogsett when the champions need a replacement for Hank Greenberg, also got three hits and was on base when Gehringer knocked the ball on the pavilion roof in right field for his home run in the first inning. Marvin Owen also hit safely three times.

Canzoneri, McLarnin Meet Again August 27

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin will put on a return showing of their slashing battle which Canzoneri won here last May in another 15 round bout in Madison Square Garden corporation's Long Island City bowl on Thursday, Aug. 27, Jimmy Johnston, the Garden's boxing promoter, announced today.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: In the '70s, S. P. Rounds had a printing supply house and published The Cabinet, devoted to subjects of interest to the printing craft. The place was located just west of La Salle on Monroe street, with office on the main floor.

Charles Southard had a printing plant on the second floor, with the top floor occupied by the Rounds shop. In later years Mr. Rounds was appointed public printer by the President, with headquarters at Washington, D. C. F. L. Thompson.

The "Around Town" column of the Chicago Evening Journal had this to say in 1876:

"Democrats are constantly saying that Republicans have forgotten that the war is over and slavery abolished. Not at all. So long as they keep in the back seats where unrepentant rebels and their sympathizers belong we let them alone; but when they step to the front, claim the platform and propose to run the government as reformers we have to remind them of their innate cussedness; for a man who would rejoice when our brave Union boys were slaughtered by Democrats or would support a peace resolution in a national convention would kick his grandmother or steal acorns from a blind pig."

Irene Rennoe.

In the Lakeside City Directory of 1859-'60 were listed the three Scanlan brothers whose families have been prominent in Chicago life. Edward Scanlan was a maufacturer and wholesale dealer in confectionery at 18 South Clark, factory at 172 North Wells, and residing at 180 La Salle avenue. Michael Scanlan was a bookkeeper, boarding at 180 La Salle, and John F. Scanlan was a salesman boarding at 180 La Salle.

Frank T. Scanlan, president of the Old Timers' Baseball association now, is a son of Edward. Judge Kickham Scanlan is a son of Michael. John Tone Scanlan is a son of John F. These men are the three oldest sons of the original Scanlan brothers.

The Bride's Bouquet.

"It's superstitious fooey—
That thing of catching a bride's bouquet
Is just a lot of hooey!
I've caught their bouquets so often,
As over the stairs they'd drop—
If I had them all together
I could open a florist shop.

No, it isn't catching the bride's bouquet
That shows a gal where bliss is—
It's catching a fellow in the mood
To make a Miss a Mrs.

Independence Day.

Originally July 4 was celebrated with patriotic exercises to mark our Declaration of Independence. While some of the original functions still prevail, it is now more a general holiday with family outings or attendance at some sports event, either as participant or spectator. Perhaps, on second thought, it's just as well—under the present social order we haven't so much independence left anyway.

Another Big Fighter.

We read that a Polish boxer, Leon Ketchell, 7 feet 3 inches tall, 275 pounds, is about to visit these United States. Let's hope he's not to be another Primo Carnera, built up with no fighting qualities except his size. Poor Primo! Exploited by scheming promoters for years, now returning to Italy worn of body, perhaps permanently injured, and little, if any, money left of his ring earnings.

Starch Wanted.

Harvey: With business discouragingly dull of late, I returned home to find Mrs. K. K. laboring over a steaming receptacle on the gas stove which I found contained starch. "If there's any left," I implored, "I'd like a little for my upper lip."

AUTO RACES AT ROBY DRAW 35 DARING DRIVERS

Best in Country Entered in Today's Speed Events.

Thirty-five of the nation's leading race drivers, led by six of the first ten money winners in the recent Indianapolis 500 mile classic, will clash this afternoon in a holiday auto racing card of seven events at the new Roby speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis boulevard.

The program will include qualifying dashes, four ten mile races, a special match race, and a 50 mile final. The qualifying tests will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning, but the main events are scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

The feature of the card is the 50-miler, but the special match race, with Rex Mays and Babe Stapp meeting at five miles, may prove to be the most spectacular event of the day.

Mays Coast Champion.

Mays won the coast A. A. A. championship last year and Stapp won the midwestern A. A. A. crown. In the qualifying tests for th Indianapolis 500 mile race this year Mays just narrowly beat out Stapp for the pole position. Today's duel also will serve to settle the Roby title, as Stapp won all three big races there last year and Mays won the 50 mile race on June 7.

The six Indianapolis money winners in the field are Mauri Rose, who was fourth in the Hoosier classic this year and second in 1934; Ray Pixley, Chet Miller, Wilbur Shaw, George Barringer, and George Connor.

Among the other drivers are

RUTH BARRON IS BELIEVED VICTIM OF PLANE FIRE

Crashes in Flames Upon Omaha Airport.

Omaha, Neb., July 3.—[Special.]—A woman flyer, believed to be Ruth Wells Barron of Rochester, N. Y., crashed in her flaming plane as she prepared to land at Omaha Municipal airport late today and was burned beyond recognition.

What caused the plane to burst into flames has not been determined. Every part of the ship was burned except the engine and metal framework. Identification numbers were destroyed.

The craft, a single cabin Warner powered monocoupe, appeared from the south just as an airliner was arriving. The pilot circled the field waiting for the big ship to land, and several persons were watching the stranger, as no private plane had been reported coming in. Suddenly the ship burst into flames and fell.

Body 2 Hours in Flames.

By the time rescuers could reach the scene virtually nothing remained of the plane, and its pilot was a charred corpse. It took nearly two hours to extricate the body from the hot, twisted metal of the plane.

A few scattered fragments of papers were found which gave the only clews to the pilot's identity. Among these were a transport pilot's license and various other identities required by the department of commerce, all greatly charred.

The pilot's license indicated the woman formerly lived in Hollywood and had moved to Rochester, N. Y. There was part of a telegram from Denver regarding the air races to be held there tomorrow in connection with the balloon races and much literature concerning the events. A map was marked from Omaha to North Platte, Neb., but nothing further. Among the papers also were several pictures, apparently of the plane and its woman pilot. The airport at Rochester identified the plane as the one in which Miss Barron left there this morning.

Find Part of Log.

The pilot's log also was found, burned but with recognizable entries which indicated several flights with passengers out of Rochester. A letter from Denver appeared to be from the Women's National Aeronautical association. A card which had borne the name of person to be notified in case of emergency was so burned that this name could not be learned.

Ruth Barron Nason was reared in Nyack, N. Y., but her home in recent years has been in Rochester, N. Y. On Jan. 21, 1932, she was married in Kobe, Japan, to William Franklin Nason, vice consul there, at the home of American Consul E. R. Dickover.

Before leaving Rochester Miss Barron confided to airport officials that she was hopeful her "jinx" had come to an end. She referred to mishaps which prevented her from finishing in other air races.

Miss Cochran in Flames.

As the plane landed it went into a ground loop. The left landing gear was broken and one wing damaged.

Miss Cochran was piloting the plane in which Howard Hughes, motion picture producer, established several speed records. The aviatrix, who has competed in several women's air races and is rated one of the leading women pilots in the country, said she would continue on to New York on a commercial plane.

GRAHAM FORTUNE DIPS TO $89,000; ONCE 12 MILLION

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—A transfer tax appraisal of the estate of the late automobile magnate, Ray A. Graham, filed in Mineola today, revealed that his fortune, in excess of $12,000,000 in 1929, shrank in seven years to less than $90,000.

The appraisal shows a gross estate of $1,335,050.40 at the time of Mr. Graham's death in Chatham, Ont., Aug. 18, 1932. Deductions for debts, administration expenses, lawyers' fees and other items, however, amounted to $1,245,781.18, leaving a net estate of $89,269.22. The inheritance tax for the state amounted to $114.14.

Mr. Graham once held a controling interest in Graham Brothers Motor corporation, but in 1927 disposed of his holding to the Dodge Motor company.

SECOND SIAMESE TWIN DIES DAY AFTER SISTER

Surgeon Unable to Cut Girls Soon Enough.

Medford, Mass., July 3.—[Special.]—A baby girl Siamese twin, who lived for nearly 30 hours following the death of her sister, died today when preparations were being made to separate the living from the dead.

Dr. John B. Vernaglia, 31 year old physician, who planned a delicate operation to separate the joined skulls of the twins, tried without success to build up the strength of the living infant.

Mother in Hospital.

However, the child, weighing only five pounds, gradually weakened and became unable to assimilate nourishment. Her sister, who weighed seven pounds, died shortly after birth Wednesday night.

Their mother, Mrs. Diego Fiorenzo, already the mother of two normal children, lay in Lawrence Memorial hospital recovering her strength. The 23 year old woman remained unaware she had given birth to twins, Dr. Vernaglia agreeing with relatives that she should not be told.

The doctor said that even had it been possible to operate on the twins there was only about one chance in a thousand that the baby would have lived. He asserted he had no successful precedent to guide him in this particular type of operation. However, Siamese twins have been separated successfully.

Illinois Twin Survives.

Marseilles, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—The only known survivor of a Siamese twin separation is nine year old Marie Keller, today a school child completely unaware that she is one of the greatest oddities of medical record.

Marie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keller, farm folk, and a third grade pupil in a country school. Born Feb. 1. 1927, she was joined by a six inch span of bone and flesh at the base of her spine to a twin born not breathing. Marie's heart pumped blood through common vessels and arteries into the body of her dead twin, until a successful operation to free her was performed by Dr. Paul Clark, Marseilles physician. Two days after the successful operation, performed in an Ottawa hospital, Marie was taken to her parents' home and official record of the case ended.

Recently, Marie was examined at a Chicago clinic and pronounced in perfect physical condition. Her parents have not permitted her to learn her history. She knows only that a sister was joined to her at birth, and is taught to regard herself as a child without abnormality. She has a younger sister and brother, both normal at birth.

Mrs. Grace V. Rolfe Dies; Retired as Store Buyer

Mrs. Grace V. Rolfe, 67 years old, 333 West Grove avenue, Lombard, for many years until her retirement 15 years ago a buyer for a loop department store, died yesterday in her home after an illness of two years. She was 67 years old. Mrs. Rolfe, who was born in Chillicothe, Mo., was the widow of Charles A. Rolfe, who died two months ago. A daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Jones of St. Louis, survives. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Monday in the chapel at 134 South York street, Elmhurst. Burial will be in Forest Home cemetery.

HOPE FOR BREAK IN DROUTH SENDS WHEAT LOWER

Heavy Profit Taking Sales Develop.

Heavy profit taking developed in American grain markets yesterday as the result of a weather forecast holding out hope that the prolonged drouth in leading agricultural states might be broken over the double holiday.

Wheat closed well above its low for the day and was unchanged to 1 cent lower net. Losses in corn ranged from ⅛ to ¼ cent, while oats were off a major fraction and rye lost 1¼ to 1⅞ cents. Barley futures closed at the top, gaining as much as 2¼ cents.

Price fluctuations were rapid during the session. New high levels were established on all deliveries of wheat and barley and July and September corn around noon hour, when a wave of buying came into the pits in sympathy with a sharp bulge in the Winnipeg market. Pressure, however, quickly asserted itself and the reaction which followed was as strong as the advance had been.

Winnipeg Rises Sharply.

The Winnipeg wheat market, where the limit on fluctuations for one day was changed yesterday from 3 to 5 cents per bushel, the same as that prevailing in Chicago, was strong throughout the day. At one time the July delivery was up as much as 4⅞ cents. Selling credited to the government agency brought about a reaction from the top, but the finish showed gains of about 4 cents.

Removal of hedges against sales of cash wheat to American and European mills strengthened the Canadian market. In addition, Chicago interests were credited with buying futures in Winnipeg.

Losses on futures in Kansas City and Minneapolis amounted to a little more than a cent a bushel, while Liverpool lost 1⅛ cents.

Belated recognition of the tremendous damage suffered by small grain crops of the United States from drouth and heat in June has brought in many speculators into the futures market. Volume of trading during the last few days has been the heaviest in a number of months.

Crop Under Needs.

Estimates yesterday by five Chicago grain experts that this year's wheat crop would be 631,000,000 bushels, or only 8,000,000 bushels more than was harvested last year, indicated the yield this year would again be under normal consumption. This figure is usually placed at 650,000,000 bushels.

Not since 1932 has the American harvest been equal to domestic requirements. Mills have been forced to draw steadily on surplus grain carried over from previous crops, with the result that the carry-over on July 1 this year is officially placed at only 125,000,000 bushels, a reduction of nearly 270,000,000 bushels from the all time record holdings in 1933.

Compare Closing Prices.

	Yesterday.	Thursday.	Wk. ago.	Mo. ago.
Wheat	$1.01½	$1.02	$ .94½	$ .88⅝
Corn	.71⅝	.71⅝	.64½	.57⅞
Oats	.34⅜	.34⅞	.30⅝	.25⅝
Rye	.68	.69½	.63⅛	.54⅞

No. 1 white corn in the Chicago market yesterday sold at 87 cents per bushel, the highest price since October, 1935. Soy beans continued the advance which has been their way since early June and sold at $1.04 per bushel, up 1 cent.

VETERANS CASH NEARLY BILLION OF THEIR BONUS

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—A total of $882,200,000 of veterans' bonus checks had been debited against the treasury's bank account with the federal reserve system up to Thursday night, indicating that veterans have more than half of the $1,673,000,000 of bonus bonds and checks to which they are entitled under the adjusted compensation payment act.

Cashing of bonus checks reached a peak on June 23, eight days after distribution began, and the daily rate has been declining since. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that bonus checks cleared through it yesterday amounted to $3,834,500 and that the total cashed in this district since June 15 amouted to $135,241,000, of which $125,171,000, represented by 298,372 individual checks, was for the redemption of bonus bonds and $10,070,000, consisting of 437,041 checks, was made up of the checks for less than $50 accompanying the bonds.

Wheat Suffers Heavy Damage During June

B. W. SNOW.

Spring wheat crop prospects declined 102,000,000 bushels during the month of June to 134,000,000 bushels, according to reports issued by Chicago statisticians yesterday, as the result of drouth and heat in the northwestern states. Last year's harvest was 170,000,000 bushels.

Intense heat in parts of Kansas and Nebraska was responsible for a reduction of 4,000,000 bushels in the winter wheat crop. Estimates on the oats crop were cut down 244,000,000, and barley 9,000,000 bushels during June.

A prospective corn crop of 2,383,000,000 bushels, providing weather conditions are normal from now on, was indicated, the largest since 1932. The reports indicated the crop was now in a critical condition in many sections because of lack of rain.

Reports Show Deterioration.

According to Nat C. Murray, 71 per cent of his reports on spring wheat at the close of the month showed the condition of the crop was declining; 33 per cent of the reports on winter wheat showed the same trend, as did 47 per cent of those on corn and 62 per cent on oats.

Indicated yield of grains on July 1, compared with June 1 private and official returns and the revised estimates for the 1935 crop, follow, in millions of bushels:

	WHEAT. Winter.	Spring.	CORN.	OATS.
B. W. Snow	470	146	2,476	949
Nat C. Murray	498	132	2,579	843
R. O. Cromwell	491	140	2,433	952
H. C. Donovan	505	120	2,330	819
E. H. Miller	521	132	2,295	910
Average, bu.	497	134	2,383	891
June 1	501	236	.....	1,135
Gov't, June 1	482	...	.....	.....
Final, 1935	—[623]—		2,292	1,195

Estimates on the rye crop averaged 28,000,000 bushels, compared with 37,000,000 bushels on June 1 and with the revised final returns for 1935 of 59,000,000 bushels. The barley crop is placed at 253,000,000 bushels, or 49,000,000 bushels less than was harvested last year.

Revise 1935 Crop Figures.

An official revision of the yield of 1935 grain crops was issued yesterday by the department of agriculture. The aggregate yield of wheat was increased 20,000,000 bushels over the figures given last December to 623,000,000 bushels. Corn was increased 89,000,000 bushels to 2,292,000,000 bushels. Little change was shown in oats and rye, while barley was reduced 10,000,000 bushels.

Volume of trading in all grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade on Thursday aggregated 91,396,000 bushels, the largest sinct Oct. 2, 1935, when 119,452,000 bushels changed hands. A war scare in Europe was responsible for the tremendous business on the latter date. The large purchases Thursday were accompanied by a net reduction of 1,451,000 bushels in uncompleted contracts in all grains, which to some observers suggested part of the advance of 5 cents in wheat and nearly 4 cents in corn that day, forcing shorts to rush to cover.

The central Illinois wheat harvesting is on in full blast and the yield is proving about the average of last year, running from 15 to 25 bushels to the acre. The wheat is of good quality and tests high, being better than number two on the average. The first load of new wheat was received on the Pana, Ill., market yesterday and brought 85 cents.

Court Denies Plea to Halt Gen. Motors Labor Hearing

St. Louis, Mo., July 3.—(AP)—United States District Judge George H. Moore declined today to give General Motors corporation, the Chevrolet Motor company, and the Fisher Body corporation an injunction to prevent the National Labor Relations board from proceeding with a hearing on a complaint charging the companies with unfair labor practices at their St. Louis assembly plant.

A. F. OF L. EXECUTIVE GROUP IN FAVOR OF OUSTING J. L. LEWIS

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—A canvass of members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor indicated today that the council stands nine to six in favor of ousting John L. Lewis from the federation. The survey shows the degree to which the ranks of labor have been split by the industrial-craft union issue raised by Lewis in the federation.

Whether the present division of opinion on the question will be maintained when the issue comes up for discussion is a matter of speculation. Many observers believe the council would not vote to throw out Lewis without unanimous backing.

Lewis controls the United Mine Workers union and eleven other unions affiliated in the fight to set up industrial unions to supersede the present craft union system. Many of the craft unions, however, are so bitterly opposed to the industrial union idea that their opposition promises to split the labor front wide open.

The big drive to organize the steel workers is expected to start Sunday with big meetings scheduled at Homestead, Pa., and Chicago.

The wheat market on April 10 looked like fine feeding grounds for hungry bears: 1. Our price was 20 cents above Liverpool. 2. Our prospective supply was 200 million bushels more than we consume. 3. Secretary Wallace issued a pessimistic statement on price outlook. Logic prevailed and there was a 15 cent dive in 10 days. Then it didn't rain. 1934 was America's worst dry spell. A year's normal rain in the wheat belt's heart runs close to a yard; the '34 record was a foot shy. April and May dryness cut down winter wheat and the arid Spring combined with almost no rain in July polished off Spring wheat. The combination turned an apparently bumper crop into the smallest since '93. After the April slump to 75 cents, wheat zoomed above the dollar stripe on damage reports from the Spring rain deficit—then sold off a dime with nearly normal June rainfall—and soared to $1.15 on persistently umbrellaless July weather.

Freight Trafic for Last Week Best in 5 Years

Loadings of revenue freight by railroads last week rose to a new top for the year, of 713,639 cars, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

Loadings exceeded the preceding week by 22,923 cars, were 96,776 above a year ago and the largest for any parallel week in five years.

This marks the thirteenth consecutive week in which freight trafic set a five year high for a particular week. Loadings came within 6 per cent of equaling 1931 for the third successive week.

The week's volume was exceeded only in October last year, when the total was slightly above 730,000 for two weeks.

Half Year Gain 10 Per Cent.

The upturn of 15.7 per cent over 1935 brought the gain for the four weeks of June to more than 13 per cent and the gain for the half year close to 10 per cent. Loadings for the first six months of this year totaled 16,550,870 cars, up 1,430,141 over the first half of 1935.

Best gains over the preceding week were shown in loadings of miscellaneous freight, grain and grain products and coal shipments.

The freight movement last week, by commodities, follows

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Misc. freight	289,805	+ 2,883	+52,468
Less than car-lot	161,300	+ 411	+ 5,347
Coal	114,157	+10,184	+ 4,119
Grains	41,738	+ 7,074	+13,504
Livestock	12,811	+ 1,125	+ 3,395
Forest products	38,030	+ 1,650	— 7,514
Ore	49,462	— 1,023	—15,027
Coke	8,336	+ 39	— 2,740

Estimate Further Rise.

Freight car loadings in the third quarter of 1936 are expected to be 10.7 per cent above actual volume in the same quarter in 1935, according to estimates of the thirteen shippers' regional advisory boards.

On this basis movement of 29 principal commodities will be 5,298,035 cars in the quarter, compared with 4,784,197 actual loadings for the same commodities in the corresponding period in 1935.

ILLINOIS HOLDS OVER 59 MILLION IN ITS TREASURY

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—(AP)—A balance of $59,072,773 was in the state treasury at the start of the new fiscal year, Treasurer John Stelle reported today.

Revenue for the first six months of 1936 was $90,841,958, compared with $154,615,605 for all of 1935, his monthly report said. June revenue was $17,590,081, the highest monthly total since January and the second highest in more than a year and a half.

Disbursement figures showed June expenditures were $17,412,400, exceeded only by May and March during the fiscal year. The June 30 balance in the general revenue fund was $10,251,052.

The state's indebtedness on June 30 was $214,177,624, of which $8,150,000 was in tax anticipation notes.

SANTA FE ROAD FORMS HIGHWAY MOTOR DIVISION

Topeka, Kas., July 4.—(AP)—S. T. Bledsoe, president, announced today the organization of the department of highway motor transportation within the Santa Fe Railroad company, with H. R. Lake of Chicago, as general manager with headquarters at Chicago.

Lake was promoted from the office of general superintendent of transportation. H. G. Brandt, trainmaster at Wellington, Kas., will be Lake's assistant. J. J. Mahoney, assistant superintendent, succeeds Lake as superintendent of transportation.

Bledsoe's announcement said Lake's new work would involve coördination of rail, bus, and truck service of the railroad and its affiliated highway transportation companies.

Chicago Bank Clearings Rise Sharply During Week

Chicago bank clearings rose sharply during the last week to a total of $346,500,000 from $290,000,000 in the preceding week and $275,500,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association announced yesterday.

CONTINENTAL ILLINOIS BANK EARNS 9 MILLION IN LAST SIX MONTHS

Net earnings of approximately $9,260,000 for the six months ended June 30 were idicated by the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company in its quarterly statement of condition released yesterday.

Comparison of the "undivided profits" items in the Dec. 31, 1935, and June 30 statements discloses an increase of $6,743,000. By adding to this amount $1,500,000 paid out in common dividends and $875,000 paid in preferred dividends, plus $145,000 for preferred dividends due in July but allocated out of first half year's earnings, it is apparent that the bank earned about $9,260,000 for the half year, which is equal, after deductios for preferred dividends, to about $11.18 per share.

This calculation applies only to net earnings from current operations. Losses are deducted from reserves for contingencies and recoveries are credited to that fund.

ENGLAND BUYS MORE GOLD TO BOOST RESERVE

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The largest purchase of gold for a single day in more than three years was arranged by the Bank of England today when the central bank announced the acquisition of £2,116,431 [$10,582,155] gold bars. The largest purchase of gold since England's suspension of the gold standard in September, 1931, was £4,468,121 [$22,340,605] on April 18, 1933.

Today's acquisition, believed to have been procured from the British exchange equalization fund, is seen as an acceleration of the central bank's desire to build up its reserves, which have been falling steadily.

Foreign exchanges were dull, but mostly higher against the dollar. French francs rose ¼ points to 6.63¼ cents, placing the value of the dollar against francs at 100.01 cents, compared with 100.05 cents yesterday.

Other gold bloc currencies were slightly higher, and the British pound rose ⅛ cent to $5.02¼. German marks gained 4 points to 40.39 cents.

Imports of gold received here today consisted of $14,300 from Nicaragua and $4,800 from Guatemala. The total gold movement for the week was the smallest since the week ended March 28 last.

INCOME HIGHER FOR AMERICAN FOREIGN POWER

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The annual report of the American and Foreign Power company for 1935, issued today, showed a balance of income before exchange adjustments of $3,591,350, compared with $2,133,465 for 1934, after all expenses, reserves, underlying dividends and minority interest, taxes and charges.

For the first quarter of 1936, a supplemental report shows, balance of income before exchange adjustments was $1,093,087, against $1,097,453 in the same period of 1935, and for twelve months ended March 31 net was $3,548,073, against $2,964,015 in the preceding year.

Operating revenues of subsidiaries for 1935 were $54,837,670, compared with $53,035,088 in 1934, with electric output 5 per cent ahead of 1934, customers served rose 6 per cent to a total of 1,096,636, of whom 1,038,359 were consumers of electric service.

After expenses and taxes net operating revenues were $22,340,917, against $21,715,836. The increase represents an improvement in local currency earnings equivalent to $1,193,453, less $568,372, due to net decreases in exchange rates, principally those of Brazil.

BANKS, MARKETS TO CLOSE TODAY

Banks, commodity, and security exchanges and virtually all business will suspend operation today, July 4. European and Canadian commodity markets will be open. The London Stock exchange, Paris bourse, and Toronto and Montreal Stock exchanges will be closed on the summer schedule. Weekly statistical and market tables will be printed in THE TRIBUNE Monday as usual. The Chicago Mercantile exchange will close today and on all succeeding Saturdays through the first week in September.

Rails' Buying Shown Largest in Five Years

Railroads loosed a flood of orders totaling nearly a half billion dollars in the first six months of this year, and they did it almost entirely out of earnings, Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, said yesterday. Two years ago they were purchasing with borrowed money, he added.

HARRY G. TAYLOR.

The half year's bill for new locomotives, cars, rail, material and supplies, and fuel reached $452,859,000, he said, and there was no sign of a letup at midyear. The volume of new equipment thus revealed was the largest since 1929.

More new freight cars were ordered in the six months than in any full year since 1930. Car orders totaled 26,560, against 7,108 in the first half of 1935. More new locomotives were purchased for the period than since 1931—122 so far this year.

Roads Better Able to Buy.

The spectacular increase in railroad spending indicates two things, Taylor said, "a return of buying power with increased trafic, both freight and passenger, and a determination to put the railroad plant in order with new, modern equipment that will gain business."

Bulking large in the half year's bill were the $9,000,000 order for cars by the Southern Pacific late in June, the Van Sweringen system's $16,000,000 order for locomotives and cars, four light weight Zephyrs ordered by the Burlington, and two streamliners ordered by the Union Pacific since the first of the year.

Altogether, the railroads spread $249,916,000 among manufacturers for materials and $71,340,000 for cars and locomotives during the first half of this year, a total of $321,719,000. Coal and fuel oil cost $131,603,000 more.

Dollar Volume Rises Sharply.

On the basis of dollar volume, the supplies bought from manufacturers were 40 per cent, or $70,000,000, greater than in the first six months last year, and 120 per cent, or $136,000,000, above the 1933 aggregate.

Taylor explained figures for June were estimated by the Railway Age. May, latest month for which exact totals are known, showed the largest volume of purchases from manufacturers for any month in five years. Railroads' expenditures for materials have increased every month since September, 1935.

Since Jan. 1 the Chesapeake & Ohio has ordered 5,400 cars; Burlington, 1,000; Milwaukee, 1,750; Missouri Pacific, 2,300; Pacific Fruit Express, 2,700, and Southern Pacific, 2,820, Taylor pointed out.

Roads Place Large Rail Orders.

Fourteen roads during the first six months ordered 10,000 or more tons each of rail, he added, among them the Santa Fe with 58,500 tons; Burlington, 25,000; Chicago and North Western, 51,000; Milwaukee, 28,000; D. & R. G. W., 10,000; Missouri Pacific, 27,000; Frisco, 17,600; Southern Pacific, 40,769; Wabash, 10,000, and Western Pacific, 31,000 tons.

Notable buying by the western lines has helped materially to boost the totals, Taylor commented, but carriers in all sections of the country reported sharp increases.

"Heavy programs of repair and replacement are being undertaken by railroads throughout the country," he said, "sending a swelling flood of money into supply and manufacturing companies."

Burlington Official Made Director of Chicago Bank

Upset Corner on Egg Mart; Find Cache of 3,500,000

SEVILLE, Spain, July 3.—(AP)—Police announced tonight they had frustrated an attempt to corner the Spanish egg market. They said they had discovered 3,500,000 eggs stored in a cave on the outskirts of the city.

COOK COUNTY'S AUTO SALES SET RECORD IN JUNE

Total for Half Year Also Is New Mark.

Automobile sales in Cook county last month were the largest on record for June, it was learned yesterday as figures were made available for the first 29 days of the month. The record smashing June figure also will lift the first six months' total to a new record.

The decline from May was less than seasonal, purchases with veterans' funds being credited for the showing because deliveries in the last two weeks of June were unusually heavy.

The June total was estimated yesterday at 12,700 automobiles on the basis of registration of 12,269 new cars in the first 29 days of the month. This compares with 8,088 cars in June, 1935, and 13,867 in May, 1936. The best previous June was in 1929, when 10,843 new cars were registered.

Half Year Sales Exceed 1929. ...

The six month total this year is placed at 65,765, against the previous record of 65,558 in the first half of 1929.

Figures for the first 29 days of June disclose the closest race ever reported in Cook county for leadership among the three most popular cars in the low price field. Plymouth accounted for 2,073 of the new car registrations, promising to be even slightly ahead of its May sales. Ford was in the lead with 2,211 registrations, maintaining a narrow margin over Chevrolet's 2,152. Chevrolet has been the leader in recent months.

The gains made by Plymouth are illustrated by the fact that it had only 975 sales in June, 1935, compared with 1,376 for Chevrolet and 2,333 for Ford. During May Plymouth registrations totaled 2,090 against 2,565 for Ford and 2,702 for Chevrolet.

Week's Output Above 100,000.

Ward's reports yesterday estimated production in automobile plants of the United States and Canada at 102,833 cars and trucks this week, compared with 104,473 last week. Cram's reports placed the week's output at 100,697, compared with 99,695 the preceding week and 59,380 in the corresponding week of last year.

Ward set the General Motors output at 45,398 units, compared with 45,458 last week. Chrysler production was estimated at 23,400, compared with 23,075 in the preceding week. Ford was unchanged at 24,310.

The Hudson Motor Car company yesterday reported sales for the week ended June 27 were 31 per cent ahead of the corresponding period a year ago and were the third highest for any week this year. Sales in the four weeks to June 27 were reported 44 per cent of the same period of 1935.

Chevrolet Sets Records.

The Chevrolet Motor company, division of General Motors, produced 128,460 cars in June in the United States, a new record total, it was announced yesterday. This represented a gain of 21,723 units over the total for June, 1935. World output of the division, including 9,546 units shipped from the United States for assembly overseas and 6,027 units built in Canada, totaled 144,023.

The June output raised the total for the second quarter to 423,657 units, resulting in a record total of 752,541 cars for the first half of the year. The total for the first half of this year was 200,987 in excess of production for the first half of the last year.

Another division of General Motors, the Pontiac Motor company, built 13,733 cars in June, compared with 17,067 cars in June, 1935, and 21,046 in May, 1936.

AUTO FINANCING EXPANDS.

Washington, D. C., July 3.—(AP)—The commerce department announced today the dollar volume of retail financing of new automobiles for May was 76 per cent above the same month of 1935, and 78 per cent over May, 1934. As compared with April, 1936, it represented a gain of 3 per cent.

Indicating that the volume of business in the motor car industry was maintaining its early 1936 pace, the department said the aggregate volume for the first five months of this year was 56 per cent above the corresponding period of 1935 and 98 per cent better than the same period for 1934.

GUARANTY TRUST CO. OF N. Y. NOW SECOND BIGGEST BANK IN U. S.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The Guaranty Trust company displaced the National City Bank of New York as the second largest bank in the country by the narrowest of margins during the second quarter, according to an analysis made today of June 30 condition statements.

Resources of Guaranty Trust at the close of last month aggregated $1,972,869,000, compared with National City's total of $1,969,852,000 on the same date. The shift in positions was brought about when the former added $160,000,000 to its resources during the three months' period, while the latter showed a gain of only $91,000,000.

In point of deposits, however, National City still retains its status as the second largest institution. Its deposits June 30 amounted to $1,730,019,000, contrasted with the Guaranty's total of $1,545,500,000.

U.S. Steel Plans Fight Against Union Drive

W. A. IRVIN.

The United States Steel corporation will defend the right of its employés to work "free from outside interference and coercion," William A. Irvin, president of the nation's leading steel producer, said yesterday.

Writing in the June issue of the United States Steel News, he addressed more than 225,000 employés of the corporation and subsidiaries with the terse statement that "the United States Steel corporation has always stood for the open shop and will continue to do so."

Irvin asserted that the corporation is convinced these are sound American principles, which have been determining factors in raising American industry and labor to a higher level than exists in any other country in the world.

Plan Vigorous Defense.

"We feel that these principles have the endorsement of the great majority of the American workers and we intend to vigorously defend them," he declared.

His remarks amplify the general principles laid down in the formal statement of the American Iron and Steel Institute last Monday, which was published in response to the recent announcement by union organizers outside the steel industry of an attempt to unionize the 500,000 employés in the field.

"Much publicity has been released by an organization outside of our industry of its aim to unionize all of our plants," Irvin wrote. "If this be accomplished, it means a closed shop where no one can secure employment unless he is a member of such organization, submits to dictation by the self-imposed leaders and subjects himself to the dues and assessments imposed upon all members.

None Need Join Union.

"No man in our employ has to join any organization in order to work for us. His progress in his work depends upon indvidual merit and effort and not upon his influence with some outside organization.

"About three years ago a plan of employé representation was adopted in the manufacturing plants. It has been amended from time to time at the request of employés and it is in effect only where a majority by secret ballot, have favored its adoption.

"It is the fairest method of collective bargaining that the employés and the management have been able to devise. The representatives are directly answerable to their own group of employés, and there are no restrictions on the choice of the employés as to whom they want to represent them.

Cites Satisfaction.

"About 90 per cent of the employés voted at the annual elections of representatives recently conducted. This is clear evidence that the plan is satisfactory to the employés. Yet it is this very plan that this group of organizers declare they will destroy.

"Those who endanger the success of the industry by stirring up trouble are enemies of all who earn their living in the business. Be not misled by the promises of false prophets who may appear in your midst for the sole purpose of creating discord and discontent for their own personal advantage."

N. Y. STOCK LIST GAINS ALMOST BILLION IN JUNE

New York, July 3.—(AP)—An increase last month of nearly a billion dollars in the market value of shares listed on the New York stock exchange was announced today. The June upturn reflected the rally in the market following a late spring decline.

The exchange reported 1,194 stock issues on July 1 had market value totaling $50,912,398,322. The total for June 1, with three fewer issues listed, was $49,998,732,557 and for July 1, last year, $36,227,069,618.

Borrowing by member firms against securities increased $18,545,402 to $988,543,241. But the ratio of loans to the market value of listed shares was unchanged at 1.94 per cent. The average share price was $38, against $37.35 on June 1 and $27.78 on July 1, 1935.

CHICAGO'S BANK DEPOSITS REACH ALL TIME HIGH

Pass 3 Billion on New Deal Cash.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Passing all boom time levels, deposits of Chicago banks are now above the three billion dollar mark for the first time in history, according to statements of the banks' condition given out yesterday in answer to the quarterly calls by the controler of the currency and the state auditor.

Total Chicago bank deposits of 3 billion, 144 million dollars on June 30, yesterday's reports disclosed, actually exceeded by 202 millions the previous all time record of 2 billion, 942 millions on Dec. 31, 1928, when the city had 220 banks. There are now 53 banks in the city.

During the three months ended June 30 total deposits rose 347 millions, of which 238 millions was accounted for by the Continental Illinois National, whose deposits alone soared 23 per cent during the quarter, rising to a new record high of 1 billion, 245 million dollars.

All Time Highs in Loop.

Other loop banks also reported new all time highs in total deposits. The First National, with 903 millions, gained 27 millions during the three months for a new record. The Northern Trust's 313 millions represented another new high for that bank and the City National forged into the record breaking class with a gain of 4 millions to a total of 121 millions. The Harris Trust's 203 millions was the highest ever reported by that institution except on one occasion when the possession of 75 millions of temporary deposits boosted the total out of line.

Chicago bank deposits now are more than double the total of 1 billion 421 millions reported just three years ago after the bank moratorium of 1933.

Use of Bank Funds Low.

Despite the present vast and growing accummulation of bank deposits in Chicago, however, the use of bank funds remains at low ebb. Total loans and discounts of all banks in the city rose about 60 million dollars in the last three months to a total of 597 millions. This figure, however, is still only 70 millions above the depression low of 527 millions reported last fall. Even in the bleak days following the bank moratorium more bank money was being employed in loans, the total on June 30, 1933, having been 694 millions.

Behind the steady inflation of bank deposits is the story of rising federal debt and the New Deal program of borrowing more and more money from the banks to finance its continuing deficits.

Deposits Rise With U. S. Debt.

As the banks of the nation buy billions of additional government securities each year, their deposits rise in proportion to the expansion of the federal debt. This has been the principal cause in the growth of deposits during the last three years not only in Chicago but throughout the country.

Individual Chicago banks now have as much as 50 per cent of their total deposits invested in government bonds. Despite this dumping of the ever expanding government debt into the commercial banks, however, the expansion of deposits resulting from each new government borrowing operation supplies the banks with still more funds to invest in still more government securities.

At the same time the use of bank funds by commercial borrowers remains small. Yesterday's figures show that only about 18 per cent of total deposits of Chicago banks are employed in loans and discounts, compared with the 71 per cent so employed at the close of 1928.

Bonus Makes Small Ripple.

So marked was the increase in Chicago bank deposits during the last three months that bonus payments to veterans accounted for only a small proportion of the quarter's rise. Based on postoffice figures it is estimated that distributions of bonus money up to June 30 amounted to about 60 million dollars, whereas bank deposits rose 347 millions.

Auditing departments of loop banks reported that the piling up of funds on June 30 by corporations in anticipation of the July 1 interest and dividend payments had something to

STOCKS STAGE LITTLE BOOM ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

Motor and Utility Groups Lead in Advance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3.—Week-end covering and a fresh supply of buying orders resulted in higher prices for stocks today in a quiet and orderly session. While the upward trend was not uniform, a majority of listed issues scored gains ranging from fractions to 2 points and more.

Trading remained on a modest basis, but some impressive gains were recorded in certain sections of the list. Total turnover for the session amounted to around 1,020,000 shares.

Motor shares and utility issues led the advance, although the steel group, recovering from its weakness of recent sessions, put on a smart recovery. Farm implement shares rallied nicely and less disposition was reported to sell mail order stocks.

Trade Reports Are Favorable.

Encouragement was given the speculative fraternity by a batch of favorable trade reports, including reviews showing better department store business. Contrary to the usual pre-holiday procedure, only a small amount of profit taking was reported.

Railroad shares were able to push ahead for modest gains as car loading figures for the week turned out to be better than was expected, hitting a new peak for the year. Van Sweringen companies were especially strong, with Chesapeake and Ohio gaining more than a point.

General Motors was bought heavily and reached its best price since late in April on a gain of more than a point. It was rumored the directors will dish out an extra dividend at their August meeting. The sales report of the company, due next Thursday, is also expected by the trading element to be bullish.

Chrysler Highest Since 1929.

Chrysler, while not quite as active, was another bullish spot, rising almost 3 points to its best price since 1929.

Purchasing increased in the utility section, particularly in the second grade preferreds, many of which leaped into new high ground.

A better feeling was evident in the steel section, where values increased fractions to a point or more. The markup was ascribed to the statement by labor leaders that the drive to unionize the industry would not be accompanied by strikes. An increase in the price of scrap metal also helped.

Bethlehem and Youngstown recovered a point or more. United States Steel, after slipping in the first hour, pushed up a large fraction. Continental and National also moved a point or more higher.

Less alarming drouth news helped the farm implements. J. I. Case led the group with a rise of 2½ points.

RAILS PLANNING OWN DRIVE FOR CO-ORDINATION

Hope Move Will Forestall New Legislation.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The Association of American Railroads is planning its own campaign of coördination for the various carriers of the country and shortly will begin advising roads on the best means of consolidating their facilities, it was indicated today.

The rapidity with which the association is acting to bring about coördination is due not only to a desire to effect savings for the carriers but also to forestall any attempt to reinstate the office of coördinator, abolished through failure of congress to extend the transportation act.

Hear of Roosevelt Plans.

Railroad men learned within the last few days that if President Roosevelt is reëlected and carries the house of representatives with him he will ask for the passage of a new bill recreating the office of federal coördinator of transportation. This would allow him to reappoint Joseph B. Eastman, whose term of office expired June 16, and who now returns to the interstate commerce commission as a member of that body.

The association plans first to study conditions in all sections of the country, and to that end has ordered representatives of the carriers in the three regions to appoint committees to report on the various projects already under consideration and new ones which may be presented to the group.

Report to Pelley.

These committees will then write their finding to the president of the association, John J. Pelley, who in turn will take up the proposals with individual roads to determine the feasibility of their being carried out.

This work, it is planned, will be done as speedily as possible, since Pelley and the association want to put into effect some economies before the convening of congress next January.

Thus they expect to be able to show the legislators that there is no necessity for the reinstatement of a federal coördinator. They want to point out that the railroads could do as much voluntarily as the coördinator could accomplish by statute.

Bonus Spending and Summer Give Boost to Retail Trade

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Retail sales of merchandise during the last week were at the best level in more than a month, Dun and Bradstreet reported today. Veterans' bonus buying and a strong revival in the demand for summer apparel were chief factors.

The estimated volume of retail sales for the country as a whole was 12 to 18 per cent over a year ago, the agency said. Distribution in the middle west, severely affected by high temperatures and crop devastation, was 10 to 12 per cent ahead of a year ago; in the northwest sales averaged 8 to 12 per cent higher, and in the south they exceeded last year's by 15 to 20 per cent.

Bonus Helps Retail Trade.

"Despite the smaller gains in the drouth districts," the review stated, "retail distribution was advanced by the cashing of bonus bonds and the stronger demand for apparel and vacation goods.

"More bonus spending was evident in the purchases of furniture, housewares, radios, and automobiles. The closing of schools and the start of the vacation season combined with the preparations for Fourth of July celebration to shift sales of sports wear, luggage, and camping outfits.

"Although many buyers deferred market trips until after July 4, when the season will open in earnest, covering of fall requirements proceeded at an active pace during the week.

Expect Big Autumn Trade.

"The volume of wholesale business already booked indicates that merchants are making commitments in preparation for the largest fall sales recorded since 1930."

On the advancing side of the business ledger the trade organization listed electric power output, steel production, freight car loadings, and new orders for lumber. Production of bituminous coal was about unchanged, crude oil output was 130,850 barrels daily over the calculations set by the bureau of mines, and bank clearings dropped 11.6 per cent below the 1935 levels.

Reflecting seasonal influences, the survey reported manufacturers of farm equipment, paint, and hardware revised their schedules downward, but a number of lines ordinarily hit by off season activity kept on going uphill, including furniture manufacturers, household equipment makers, and sporting goods concerns.

CHICAGO BANK DEPOSITS HIT ALL-TIME HIGH

3 Billion 144 Million Total; Loans Few.

do with the upturn. At the Continental bank, where most of the increase occurred, it was reported that somewhat larger deposits of public funds and heavier balances carried for out of town banks helped boost the total.

Reflects Spending Policy.

The broader picture, however, showing the steady increase in deposits of all banks from the 1933 low point to the new high record on June 30 was admittedly largely the reflection of the administration's policy of spending and borrowing.

That Chicago's experience has not been unique is disclosed in current figures from other cities showing deposits rising to record levels. From coast to coast banks are reporting steadily increasing deposits, heavier purchases of government bonds, and a stubborn hesitancy on the part of commercial loans to increase in proportion to the rise in deposits.

Contrasting sharply with the tendency of most banks to increase their purchases of government debt was the statement of the City National Bank of Chicago, headed by the former Republican Vice President, Charles G. Dawes.

Dawes' Bank Cuts Holdings.

The City National almost halved its holdings of government securities, reporting a total of only 18 million on June 30, compared with 34 million three months before.

The First National bank, which yesterday retired the last 15 millions of its preferred stock held by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, reduced its holdings of government paper from 319 millions on March 4 to 199 millions on June 30.

45 MILE SPEED LIMIT URGED BY U.S. TRUCK BUREAU

I. C. C. Unit Proposes Broad Supervision.

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—A national speed limit of 45 miles an hour for buses and trucks operating as common or contract carriers in interstate commerce was proposed in a set of safety regulations for these vehicles issued today by the bureau of motor carriers of the interstate commerce commission.

The regulations would be imposed under the authority of the motor carrier act of 1935, which gives the commission jurisdiction over buses and trucks operating in interstate commerce similar to that which the commission has long had over the railroads.

Regulation Broad.

In addition to the 45-mile-an-hour speed limit, the proposed regulations would cover driving practices, equipment, lights, horns, requirements for safety glass, and would also set up machinery for gathering information as to the qualifications of drivers and setting forth proper standards for drivers with a view to ultimate licensing. Regulations for the reporting of accidents were also concluded.

The proposed regulations were described as merely the beginning of a long-term program which would include the medical examination and licensing of drivers by the commission, as well as limitations on the hours of service of drivers as a protection against the danger of fatigue. The program contemplates inspection and maintenance safeguards to keep carriers to standards set up by the commission, the inspections to be made by the carrier subject to check by the commission, identification of each vehicle by number, and the establishment of standards of the size and weight of motor vehicles.

Private Carriers Excluded.

The regulations proposed would apply only to common and contract carriers, leaving the field of private motor carriers in interstate commerce for further study because of the administrative problems involved.

"Even in the comparatively limited field of interstate for-hire operations, however, these safety provisions are of great importance, for their effect may be expected to extend far beyond the scope of their immediate application and ultimately to promote greater safety over the whole field of motor vehicle operation," the bureau said.

The proposals are expected to draw some criticism from interested truck and bus operators. The speed limit is particularly expected to draw fire.

HOLIDAY PROFIT TAKING SENDS BUTTER PRICE LOWER

Pre-holiday profit taking in November butter futures on the Mercantile exchange developed yesterday with the close ⅛ cent lower at 32¼ cents per pound. Uncertainty as to weather conditions over the double holiday was a factor in inducing selling, but a good demand was in evidence on the decline. Sales were 117 cars.

Firmness in the spot egg market, relatively light into storage movement and increasing reports as to the unfavorable effect of heat on the quality, advanced the October delivery ½ cent to 25¾ cents per dozen. Sales were 57 cars. November potatoes were unchanged at $1.75 per 100 pounds with sales of 6 cars. Prices follow:

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—An upward trend prevailed in bond prices today, although there were spots of irregularity in the corporate list. Volume was of moderate proportions, with transfers totaling $9,315,000, compared with $9,534,000 on Thursday.

U. S. governments and low-priced rail liens provided high spots of interest. Federal Farm Mortgage 3s were the most active government obligation and ended with a gain of 3-32 at 103.3. Gains elsewhere ranged from 2-32 for the Treasury 4s of 1944 to 7-32 for the 3s of 1951.

Railroad Bonds Advance.

A number of carrier bonds changed hands at gains of 1 to more than 4 points. A rush of buying in mortgages of the Alleghany corporation, a holding unit that stands to benefit from improvement in railway operating income, found holders unwilling to part with securities except at higher prices. The stamped 5s bounced up 4¼ points, the 5s of 1950 rose 4⅝, and the 5s of 1949 sprinted 1¾ points.

Other corporate bonds commanding enough buyers to lift prices major fractions to more than a point included Chesapeake Corp. 5s, International Hydro-Electric 6s, Lehigh Valley General 4s, Manati Sugar 7½s, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3⅛s.

Foreign Group Is Quiet.

Foreign bonds dropped to the background after holding interest for several days. French stamped 7s provided the only worthwhile movement, advancing 3 points. Polish obligations quieted. Italian bonds were steady.

Professional evening up of accounts in advance of the two-day week-end accounted for most of the activity in the market today.

Belleaire Hotel.

Investors' Guide: Please give me information on mortgage bonds issued against the Belleaire hotel. —H. G. M.

Answer: A plan for reorganization of the Belleaire hotel, 420-28 Diversey parkway, Chicago, was submitted to bondholders on May 28, 1936. It provides that a new corporation be formed to take over the properties and issue stock to present bondholders at the rate of 1 share for each $100 in principal amount of bonds.

A loan of not to exceed $90,000 would be obtained to pay all accrued taxes and all or part of costs, fees, and expenses incident to foreclosure and reorganization proceedings. It would bear 5 per cent interest, be due in ten years and be secured by a first mortgage. Included in the obligations to be paid off are $26,710 borrowed by the committee to provide for necessary cash expenditures.

An issue of $725,000 first mortgage 5½ per cent bonds was sold in 1925, secured by the property. This was reduced to $665,000 by the date of default, April 15, 1930. Maturity of the issue was to have been Oct. 15, 1935.

Following the default the property was placed in receivership and foreclosure proceedings filed on June 14, 1930. The decree of foreclosure was entered Dec. 20, 1932. Carrying out of the proposed reorganization awaits approval of the courts and expiration of the 15 month period for redemption of the property following foreclosure sale on June 19, 1936.

The property consists of the land and seven story concrete, brick, and hollow tile hotel building half a block west of Sheridan road, fronting 100 feet on Diversey parkway and with a depth of 150 feet. The building contains 252 hotel rooms, four stores and a dining room on the first floor, and a roof apartment.

From filing of foreclosure on June 14, 1930, to March 31, 1936, receipts amounted to $493,618. Operating expenses were $351,311. Total disbursements, however, were $485,925 and the balance on hand on March 31, 1936, was $7,693. Total disbursements included $62,500 taxes for years extending back to 1927. Fees for the receiver and his attorney took $25,150, and trustee's and master's fees took $17,500 more. Insurance and other items accounted for the remainder.
